Tractors & Truffles

Culinary sophistication meets rural charm during this annual Fallon event.

STORY & PHOTOS BY CHARLIE JOHNSTON

The farm-to-table movement has swept the restaurant world like a delicious deluge in recent years. The concept is simple: locally produced food delivered to local consumers. The benefits are numerous: transporting locally produced food is cheaper and requires less fuel, customers can learn more about—and have more control over—what they eat, and local farmers benefit from increased demand for their products. And the results are revolutionary: mouth-watering food that is remarkably fresh, satisfyingly sustainable, and surprisingly affordable.

Fallon's annual Tractors & Truffles, September 22, is a celebration of local food and the rural town's thriving agriculture community. Perhaps better described as tables-to-farm, Tractors & Truffles brings guests to their food during a day of culinary exploration with some of the region's most revered chefs and restaurateurs.

Reno chef Mark Estee heads the 2012 lineup and is best known for his successful Reno eatery, Campo. Estee is joined by fellow farm-to-table forefather and executive chef and owner of Fallon's own The Slanted Porch, Steve Hernandez, and Chef Director at the International Culinary School at the Art Institute of California, San Francisco, Mark Davis.

The event starts with a shuttle ride from Oats Park to Lattin Farms for lunch and a tour hosted by Rick Lattin. The Lattin family has been farming in the Lahontan Valley for five generations and is one of Nevada's most popular purveyors of vine-ripened fruit and fresh produce. Lunch will be prepared on the farm by the chefs and will include cooking demonstrations.

Following lunch, guests will attend a wine tasting and tour at Churchill Vineyards on the historic Frey Ranch. One of just a handful of wineries in the state, it is the only Nevada winery that produces Nevada grown, produced, and bottled estate white wines. According to Colby Frey, a fifth-generation Nevada farmer and winemaker at the vineyard, the award-winning wines get their intricate flavors and delicate aromas courtesy of the drastic temperature shifts of Fallon's high-desert climate.

Guests are returned to Oats Park following the winery tour and tasting for a music workshop with the Defibulators, described on the band's website as "one of the most engaging live acts from the thriving roots scene in Brooklyn, New York; melding bluegrass, rockabilly, classic country, and punk into their own eclectic indie honky-tonk sound."

Cocktails at Oats Park lead up to the main event of Tractors & Truffles: dinner. Prepared by Estee, Hernandez, Davis, and a host of sous-chefs and kitchen staff, the multi-course gourmet meal features local and sustainable foods—many from farms and ranches within the Lahontan Valley—for a truly unforgettable dining experience.

New to this year's event, dinner will be served family-style, with seating along long tables to provide for greater guest interaction and participation, and the kitchen will be located so that guests can see the meticulous assembly of each course. "The farmers who grow the food will be invited to attend to help make the connection between farm and dinner more meaningful," says Rick Gray, executive director of the Fallon Convention & Tourism Authority.

After dinner, the Defibulators return to perform at the Barkley Theater inside the Oats Park Art Center. ▀

Clockwise from top middle: Fall means pumpkins and squash of every description at Lattin Farms. Colby Frey is a fifth-generation Nevada farmer and heads the winemaking operation at Churchill Vineyards. The historic and picturesque Frey Ranch is home to Churchill Vineyards. Kelli Mae Kelly of Fallon's The Slanted Porch prepares dinner's first course. John Ash, the event's featured chef in 2011, talks about the meal that anxious guests are about to enjoy. Debbie Frey prepares to serve her Churchill Vineyards wine. Opposite page: Antique tractors adorn the lawn at Oats Park during Tractors & Truffles.

Grape Stomp

Have your wine and “feet” it, too, at Pahrump Valley Winery.

BY ADAM ROBERTSON

If you like wine and getting your feet dirty, this is an event for you. The Pahrump Valley Winery Grape Stomp is a perfect opportunity to enjoy the fruits of Bacchus while getting a workout and having good, messy fun.

The Pahrump Valley Winery—about an hour west of Las Vegas—holds its annual Grape Stomp October 6-7. Teams of two get two minutes to “stomp their hearts out” and try to extract as much juice out of their grapes as possible. The stomping begins at 1 p.m. and usually ends around 4:30 p.m., with competitions every 15 minutes.

Spots fill up quickly, so it is recommended that teams sign up early. Registration must be done in advance, and the $30 fee covers the cost of admission, competition entry, and T-shirts.

Along with the competition are wine tastings, food, crafts from local vendors, and music. Prizes include gift certificates to the winery’s restaurant (Symphony’s) and gift shop and are awarded to the best teams per hour and per day, best costumes, and “worst” stomper. The winery also hosts its largest sale of the year, with many of its wines discounted below wholesale.

Based on an Italian grape-harvest festival, the Grape Stomp was started in the mid-’90s, and the tradition continued when Bill and Gretchen Loken took over the winery in 2003. Since then, the Lokens have expanded the stage and turned the Grape Stomp from a small one-day affair into a two-day event with more than 3,000 attendees.

Nevada may seem like an unusual place to grow grapes and make wine, and the Pahrump Valley Winery has certainly had its share of challenges: from wild horses eating plants to making sure crops are sufficiently watered. However, by use of drought-resistant roots, special trelliswork, and a bit of luck, the winery has managed to cultivate 13 acres of grapes, for an estimated harvest of more than 35 tons in 2012.

In 2008, the winery released Nevada’s first commercial red wine (2005 Zinfandel), which won gold at the Pacific Rim International Wine Competition. It was the first victory of many, giving rise to Pahrump Valley Winery’s claim of “Bringing Gold to the Silver State.”

NEVADA AIR SHOWS

Autumn aviation events are right at home in the Silver State's wild blue yonder.

Nevada's boundless skies practically beg to be filled with barrel-rolling planes, crisscrossing contrails, and the roar of jet engines. From fly-ins and air races to open houses and air shows, Nevada is home to some of the country's most unique and popular aviation events.

The Lyon County Fly-In, October 6-7 at Silver Springs Regional Airport, promotes aviation with an eye toward education and interaction between pilots and flight enthusiasts. In its 16th year, the fly-in is dedicated to antique aircraft and modern military and firefighting planes.

In 2011, the event was attended by thousands of spectators and more than 70 pilots, and 208 Young Eagles earned their wings by logging their first flights. Organizers expect the 2012 event to draw more than 5,000 people with a variety-filled schedule that includes demonstrations, the Young Eagles First Flight program, special NASA exhibits, live entertainment, food, crafts, raffles, and the largest array of flying machines in Northern Nevada.

The Historic Wendover Air Show's Silver Wing Wing-walkers defy gravity during the September 22 event.

The Lyon County Fly-In's Young Eagles First Flight program offers children eight to 17 the chance to fly free with general aviation pilots.

The fly-in is open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, and the Air Ranch Breakfast is offered from 7-10 a.m. each day and is free to pilots who fly in. lyoncountyflyin.com, 775-887-1294

Reno's National Championship Air Races and Air Show will take to the skies for its 49th year, September 12-16. The event, held at Reno Stead Airport, is the last of its kind and an institution for Northern Nevada and aviation enthusiasts from around the world. High-flying action from a bygone era comes courtesy of six racing classes, the always-popular pit, static aircraft displays, and military and civilian flight demonstrations. There are three heats for each class daily. In between the heats is a world-class airshow. airraces.org, 775-972-6663

The Historic Wendover Airfield, once home to the World War II B-29 Bomber unit responsible for dropping the atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki in August 1945, hosts the annual Historic Wendover Air Show on Saturday, September 22. The schedule of events includes viewings of vintage WWII aircraft, aerial acrobatics, and performances by the Silver Wing Wingwalkers. wendoverairbase.com

Nellis Air Force Base calls its annual open house and air show one of the most diverse aviation events in America and one of the largest public events in Nevada. Aviation Nation, November 10-11, celebrates 71 years of airpower in Las Vegas and the Air Force's accomplishments in air, space, and cyberspace. Several military air demonstration teams, including the world famous Thunderbirds, are scheduled to perform, and ground displays will depict the history of American aviation.
