A University united against an unprecedented challenge

No matter how well plans are formulated, there must always be room for contingency and flexibility, particularly when the world is facing a challenging and uncertain time.

The outbreak of the novel coronavirus (COVID-19) has presented the State of Nevada with an unprecedented public health battle. Nevada Gov. Steve Sisolak, using every means available to him in order to “flatten the curve” and reduce the rate of the outbreak, ordered the closure of casinos and all nonessential businesses on March 18. Our University, in response to Gov. Sisolak and Chancellor Thom Reilly’s directives, mobilized in historic fashion to move instruction online and to deliver operations and services remotely.

With a presidential search still to be conducted, and with the possibility of budget reductions in the State of Nevada and the University’s future, I made the decision in early April to postpone my transition to the faculty until Dec. 31, 2020, or until my successor is named. Through an extension of the original search timeline, the final candidates for the position of president will be interviewed on Sept. 16, 2020, with the ad hoc presidential search committee, made up of Regents and institutional advisory members, meeting on Sept. 17, 2020 to make their decision on who will fill the role.

I wish to thank Chancellor Reilly, Chair Jason Geddes and Vice Chair Mark Doubrava of the Board of Regents for agreeing to allow me to remain in the Office of President in order to provide stability and continuity of leadership during this challenging time.

If there is one thing the University has demonstrated throughout its 146-year history, it is that the people of our University know how to unite, for the good of all, when pressed by the challenges of our time. Working together, we will get through this moment.

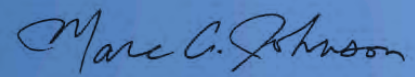

In the wake of the COVID-19 crisis, the University has come together in incredible ways, including but not limited to:

- Pack Provisions, the University’s food pantry program, delivered food, in partnership with Campus Escort services, to students living near the University in the first weeks following the interruption of campus operations. The service has now transitioned to issuing a $40 grocery fund payment available to at-risk students every other week through the spring semester.
- Acknowledging student concerns about holding a virtual spring commencement, the University announced Spring 2020 graduates would have the choice to celebrate their achievements coinciding with, but separate from, either the Winter 2020 graduation ceremonies or Spring 2021 ceremonies.

- The Nevada State Public Health Laboratory provided COVID-19 testing capacity for the public health needs of the state.
- Primary care and mental health practices provided telemedicine and telepsychiatric services for patients.
- Personal protective equipment was mobilized across campus to support University health care staff in their clinical duties.
- University makerspaces and 3D printers churned out face shields, battery packs for air-purifying respirators, face masks and patterns and kits for gowns that were all used in health care settings throughout the community.

Thank you all for your continued support and extraordinary work on behalf of the University.

'People will know that we had something special'

In October 2019, President Marc Johnson announced his upcoming retirement in summer 2020, following more than nine years as the institution's 16th president. Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, Johnson's term has been extended through Dec. 2020, or until his successor is named. After the new president is in place, Johnson will transition to Department of Economics faculty in The College of Business.

'People will know that we had something special'

As Marc Johnson's time as president winds down, a look back at his historic tenure by JOHN TRENT '85, '87 '00 M.A.

Shammon Ellis can still remember her first meeting with Marc Johnson. It was in the spring of 2008, and candidates for the executive vice president and provost's position at the University of Nevada, Reno were shuttling in and out of a dimly lit room in a local casino.

Johnson was dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences at Colorado State University.

Ellis, the University's longtime vice president of Student Services, recalled that, "this very tall man comes into the room and immediately went around and introduced himself."

Johnson's nine-year tenure as president is notable for the unprecedented growth and prestige.

Ellis wasn't just struck by Johnson's height. At well over 6 feet tall, Johnson made a point of not only asking each search committee member's name, but repeating their name out loud, and then asking a few questions of each person.

"This was not common for candidates to do," Ellis said. "He was a person who looked you right in the eye. Right away, you could tell we had somebody who had great interpersonal skills."

When it came time to ask a question, Ellis mentioned that the University was hoping to build a living learning community on campus. What Ellis was asking about was more than a residence hall. It was a place where students would be grouped by their academic interests in individual "learning communities," with an interface with the campus that would include dedicated classrooms, learning spaces and faculty offices.

Prior candidates didn't exactly understand what Ellis was talking about.

"What I most remember was when I asked him about how we were hoping to build a living learning community, and if he had any experience in that, Marc just beamed," Ellis said. "He said, 'I've been a part of a number of living learning communities on the campuses where I've worked and in particular...' And then he just went on and on and on about it. Right away, I knew we had an experienced academician who understood what we were trying to accomplish."

Johnson's recollection of the interview?

"I got the impression that the people who worked here really loved their work," said Johnson, who was hired as provost in spring 2008 and ascended to full-time president in spring 2012. "Probably the most enthusiastic person I met during that visit was Shannon Ellis. I was very impressed with how she exhibited her love of the campus. As it has turned out, I've been so lucky to work with so many people just like Shannon – people who love our University, who are committed to its mission, and who through their daily work remind us what a special place the University truly is."

Johnson's nine-year tenure as president is notable for many reasons. The University has experienced unprecedented growth and prestige, from record student enrollment to the number of National Merit and Presidential Scholars on campus to the diversity of the student body to record faculty productivity. Several prestigious landmarks in higher education have also been attained, such as the classifications of "Very High Research," or "R1," by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, as well as the "Carnegie Engaged" classification, signifying an extraordinarily high level of involvement with the community.

The accomplishments have not come without challenge. There were record budget cuts the University endured. More than $100 million of its budget was cut and more than 700 budgeted positions were eliminated during the recessionary period of 2010-2012. There was the trauma of the sudden loss of President Milt Glick, who died of a stroke in 2011. Throughout it all, there has been Johnson's constancy, first as provost, then as acting/interim president in the months following Glick's death.

When Johnson leaves the President's Office on the second floor of Clark Administration in June, his time as the institution's 16th president will rank as fourth longest in University history.

“Marc’s success is attributable to his deep commitment to the University,” said Provost Kevin Carman. “It’s absolutely unwavering. I’ll miss his leadership, no question about that. He has been an inspiration to me and to the entire University. It’s going to be a big transition not having Marc on the second floor of Clark Administration.”

WHEN ASKED ABOUT THAT NIGHT IN 2011, Johnson doesn’t have to consult a planner, or check his phone for a calendar to see if his memory is still right.

“Saturday, April 16, 2011,” he said without any prompting about his recollections surrounding the death of Milt Glick. “We were nearing the end of the 2011 legislative session. We were looking at our third major budget reduction in two years. The president and I would meet frequently about how to handle the third budget reduction. That Saturday night I went to a University play. And then I got a call on my phone, which I checked at intermission.”

The message Johnson heard was brief. Glick, who had been president since 2006, had suffered a major stroke. Johnson quickly made his way to Renown Regional Medical Center. He was with Glick’s wife, Peggy, throughout the night before the University’s 15th president passed away.

The next few days were a blur for Johnson. He had loved working with Milt Glick, who was known for his smile, quick wit and magnetic ability to coalesce support across campus for his vision of a “sticky campus” engaged with its local community and state. But Johnson, an agricultural economist by training, knew that there was still the matter of the third round of budget cuts looming.

“I tried to work from two aspects,” Johnson said. “One, we had just lost our president. We had to be mindful of that great loss to our institution. It was a very emotional time. Secondly, we were just going through our last round of budget cutting as a result of the 2011 session. So it was very busy, as well as being very emotional.

“I’m kind of an institutionalist from the standpoint that the institution becomes primary and you just work whatever hours are necessary, in whatever way you think necessary, in order to keep the institution progressing. Somehow, we all just carried on.”

“One of the most important things that Marc did during that period was he talked to everybody, anybody whose unit was being shut down, anybody who was being affected by the budget reductions,” said Jason Geddes ’90 (biochemistry), ’95 M.S. (environmental science & health), chair of the Nevada System of Higher Education Board of Regents and a former ASUN president. “He would talk to all of them, face-to-face, personally, and explain the decision and why it had come to be. He was a clear, stable, rational voice when the University really needed it.”

Johnson felt that even faced with a profound tragedy and a time with uncertain, diminished budgets, it was important that the University look forward. Following a national search in spring 2012, he was appointed full-time president. It was not long after that his message to campus began to center on achieving goals such as Carnegie R1, reducing the student to faculty size in the classroom to 18:1, and re-investing in the success of the University’s students, faculty and staff.

“I think every institution needs a set of big goals to achieve,” Johnson said. “So that was part of my thinking. By 2012, we were already seeing signs that our enrollment was going to increase. It looked as though the economy was turning around, so that we could anticipate some stability, even some growth in our revenues. All of our big goals were very mission focused, and we knew that we needed to mature in all three of our missions (learning, discovery, and engagement) if we were going to be successful.”

Carman, who had been dean of the College of Science at Louisiana State University before arriving on campus in February 2013, quickly came to understand Johnson’s vision. He also appreciated the president’s keen attention to detail.

“We always joke about how many decimal points Marc needs to have whenever we talk about any percentage related to any aspect of the University,” Carman said. “He’s a very detail-oriented guy. You come to really see why this is one of his great strengths. But he’s also acutely aware of the big picture. He understands how to work methodically toward achieving those important institutional goals, goals that advance the mission of the University, while also paying attention to the big picture.”

The “big” institutional goals that Johnson set — from adding more than 250 new faculty, to transforming the campus’ built environment with several new buildings and renovations, including student-centered structures such as the E.L. Wiegand Fitness Center, the William N. Pennington Student Achievement Center, three new on-campus residential communities, tripling the capacity for graduate student housing, to finding innovative ways to reach out to the community through the launch of the University of Nevada, Reno Innevation Center near downtown Reno, and aligning the campus’ master planning effort with that of the City of Reno and the Regional Transportation Commission — have all spoken to a vision that was ongoing and all-encompassing.

JAY NORVELL HAD BEEN A COACH

for three decades. He had coached at 11 universities, coordinated the offenses of some the best college football programs in the country, and he had coached in the NFL. By age 53 in late 2016, despite having such a distinguished coaching career, he had never been hired as a head coach.

“It’s been my life’s work,” Norvell said of coaching, “and there were a lot of university presidents who did not give me that opportunity, for one reason or another.”

He paused, still speaking carefully. “And I felt like I was extremely qualified,” he said. “I coached in (Bowl Championship Series) bowl games, I coached in a national championship game, I coached in the Super Bowl, and I interviewed for many head coaching positions with university presidents.”

That all changed when he interviewed for the head coaching job at the University. He remembered meeting Athletics Director Doug Knuth and Johnson. He remembered how Johnson asked him questions that went beyond football, to life. He remembered feeling that for once, he was being judged on his professional and personal merits.

“I want to thank Marc Johnson for the opportunity to be the head coach here at the University of Nevada. It finally all came together here, thanks to Marc Johnson.”

Norvell, the first African-American head football coach in the University’s history, said that in his experience, Johnson’s concern about the campus’ environment has been noteworthy.

“The educational programs he’s put in place to train people of authority to have inclusive pools of candidates, to create a more diverse campus environment for student-athletes, I think that comes directly from his leadership,” Norvell said. “I’m very, very proud to be a part of that, and I think that sets us apart from many other universities across the country.”

ASUN President Anthony Martinez said that Johnson’s handling of a number campus issues over the past few years, including questions regarding freedom of assembly, freedom of speech and freedom of expression, though not without some controversy, has been thoughtful and fair.

“I think President Johnson has been a role model,” Martinez said. “He’s handled everything with such grace, and with such respect for the people he has dealt with. He’s always valued people’s feedback, and their opinions. He’s very good at handling constructive criticism. That’s something I really do admire about him.”

Johnson said issues of freedom of expression on college campuses are not easy. When it was suggested that there isn’t a manual on how to handle such questions, he smiled and quietly noted, “Well, there is sort of a manual. It’s called the Constitution of the United States.”

“It’s our responsibility to be teachers,” he added. “It’s our responsibility as a learning institution to encourage an environment of exploration. The educational institution needs to try and help students put these important questions into an historical context, so they can learn how to listen, and respect different views. We shouldn’t tell people what to think. We should help them determine what their values are, and how if necessary they should challenge viewpoints they feel should be challenged.”

NOW THAT HIS TIME IS WINDING DOWN, don’t expect Johnson to slow down.

Early in the spring semester, he talked about the details surrounding construction of the new business building, how the “Gateway” partnership with RTC and the City of Reno was bringing the campus closer to downtown and vice versa, and upcoming Regents meetings.

“I’ve never left a job where I wasn’t working hard up until the last day. We have so much still to do,” he said.

When Johnson transitions to the Department of Economics in the College of Business, he will teach two classes per semester. He and his wife, Karen Penner-Johnson, are hoping to spend more time with their family’s three children and six grandchildren.

“It’s been part of our conversation for the last two or three years because we have six grandchildren now, three of whom have just turned two,” Johnson said of what led to his Oct. 31, 2019 announcement that he would transition to the faculty. “Our instinct to spend more time with the grandchildren is tremendous. Karen’s been able to get away to attend to the grandchildren, and I have not. I don’t want to miss the young years of our grandchildren’s lives.”

Speaking of Karen, who herself has been a college professor and who has played an indispensable role in the Johnson presidency by serving on boards in the community – including chair of the Reno Chamber Orchestra board – and in attending hundreds of events with her husband, Johnson said, “She’s been an understanding and supportive spouse – supportive of me, supportive of the institution, supportive of our mission, supportive of our community. You can’t ask for much more than that.”

Norvell recalled this past spring’s first annual “Grit Run 5K,” a race held on campus in support of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Norvell’s wife, Kim, has had cystic fibrosis for many years, and has been one of the prime drivers in the community for awareness and action.

“When I told President Johnson and Dr.

Penner-Johnson about the Grit Run, they didn’t even hesitate,” Norvell said, noting that both participated in and finished the race. “They asked when was it going be and they asked what could they do to help. They are a great, great team together.”

When asked about Johnson’s legacy, Ellis said that as much as Johnson was an economist, skilled in decimal points and numbers within budgets, it was the softer moments that she was going to remember. In times of challenge and tragedy, in times of achievement and accomplishment, the one constant the University has come to know is Johnson’s consistency.

“I think Marc will be viewed as a highly successful president,” Ellis said. “Not just long term, but shortly after he is gone, people will know that we had something special here in Marc Johnson. It’s going to be his relationships and his willingness to learn and listen and to be open, warm, and genuine, that will always remind people that we had something special in his presidency.

“Because of who he is, he brought out the best in all of us.” N

On April 10 it was officially announced that President Johnson would continue to serve as the president of the University of Nevada, Reno through Dec. 31, 2020, or until his successor has been named. The agreement provides the University with consistent leadership through the COVID-19 crisis while also providing a stable transitional bridge into office for the University’s new president.

Peter Sebaaly: Engineering and science research leads to improved pavement design

by NIKKI MOYLAN photos by THERESA DANNA

(Left to right) Professor Peter E. Sebaaly, Pavement Engineering and Science Program Manager Murugaiyah Pirath-eepan '11 M.S., graduate student Stephanos Khalil, graduate student Nicole Elias, graduate student Forrest Hierholzer and Associate Professor Elie Hajj '03 M.S., '05 Ph.D. in the Pavement Engineering and Design laboratory.

When most people think about the environment, they may not think about how materials such as pavement are recycled. But Professor Peter Sebaaly thinks about this topic all of the time. Director of the Western Regional Superpave Center at the University, and professor of civil engineering, Sebaaly has spent nearly three decades on campus working toward improvements in pavement design, maintenance, and recycling of materials. He was named the 2019 Outstanding Researcher of the Year.

The Western Regional Superpave Center at the University of Nevada, Reno, is one of five centers created by the Federal Highway Administration to research and implement Superpave technology. As a part of pavement engineering and science, the center offers strong academic and research programs for students looking to work in that field, while also promoting sustainability.

Two College of Engineering faculty in pavement engineering and science, Elie Hajj and Adam Hand, work alongside Sebaaly, exploring new methods and technologies in pavement engineering.

Recycled asphalt pavement leads to earth-friendly practices

“There are three things that are considered to be environmentally friendly that we do,” Sebaaly said. “The first is we recycle old asphalt pavements inside the new.”

Sebaaly said that pavement experiences a lot of damage because of cars and trucks using it, so its average lifespan is 20 to 25 years. He said that old asphalt can be recycled into new pavements, and all of it is used. This prevents waste and helps preserve both the environment and the roads.

“There are 4.5 million miles of roads in the United States, and 95% of them are asphalt,” Sebaaly said. “Recycling asphalt pavement is encouraged here in Nevada, and everywhere else.”

Recycling old tires can give them new life

The second environmentally friendly technique that the center uses is recycling old tires into asphalt. Described by Sebaaly as a “very natural process,” tires are ground up and placed into the asphalt.

“Tires are a product that would go to the dump once they’re done being used, but now it gets put into a natural process where almost 50% of the asphalt is replaced, and it doesn’t hurt the asphalt or the road. It’s a win-win situation,” he said.

Reducing high production temperatures can also help save energy

The third way researchers are reducing the environmental cost of pavement happens at the production plant. Typically asphalt and its aggregates are heated to 350 degrees Fahrenheit, which requires a high amount of energy. Sebaaly with colleagues and their team of graduate student researchers are using additives to reduce the production temperature by 100 degrees, which saves about 30% of the energy typically used in production.

A point of pride for Sebaaly are the graduate students in the Pavement Engineering and Science program.

The comprehensive graduate program in pavement engineering and science is fully-funded by external research activities. All research activity in the program is conducted by graduate students who are actively supervised by a program manager, Murugaiyah Piratheepan and the program’s other faculty, Elie Hajj and Adam Hand. Additionally, students in the graduate degree program generally receive full financial support to pursue their graduate degrees.

“We’re probably the only program in the country that has a faculty that spent 18 years in a construction company and then came back to academia,” Sebaaly said. “So that gives us a unique feature and allows us to offer courses in pavement construction that other universities don’t.”

Eight graduate courses are offered in the Pavement Engineering and Science program at the College of Engineering, covering diverse topics such as pavement design, material design and production, pavement management, maintenance, and rehabilitation, and pavement construction. Exposure to all aspects of pavement is important to help students understand pavement performance and sustainability, so it’s easier for them once they are trained and certified.

“At the end of their degrees, our students are ready to go to work, and well trained in an industry where they make the roads, and taxpayers through government agency own the roads,” Sebaaly said. “[The government is] glad to have engineers who want to work and are very appreciative.” N

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge, philanthropist, community advocate and Wolf Pack Athletics supporter

What life experiences led you to where you are today?

My family moved from Chicago to Reno when I was just four years old, so this is the place that's been home to me up to this time in my life. As a child, we spent a lot of time on the University campus. My father was a big basketball fan and I remember playing ball at the gym on campus when I was young. I was already very familiar with campus when it came time to go to college after I graduated from Reno High. The University had a great journalism department, which is what I wanted to pursue, so it was a natural fit for me to choose to go to college here.

As a student, I worked as a stringer for the Nevada State Journal. Right after my college graduation, I had an offer of a full-time job there, so sports writer was my first official title in the newspaper world. I was extremely pleased with the education I received at Nevada.

At that time, the Vietnam War was really heating up. I was considering law school, but wanted to do active duty first. I served as a military police officer and as a public communications officer. In this role, I got more journalism experience as publisher of the newspaper at Fort Ord, Calif. I left the Army in 1970 and decided to pursue my law degree.

My foundation in journalism from the University was great preparation for law school. I was accepted at Notre Dame.

As a student there, I worked in the press box during football and basketball games and managed to always have my hand in scorekeeping.

After completing my J.D., I lived in San Diego for a time, but eventually came back to Reno where we raised our children. I soon became involved in the athletics scene here on campus again, and I'm now entering my 45th year of stats keeping for Nevada.

Why have you been active with Wolf Pack Athletics for so many years?

The University was such a great part of my childhood and I love sports. The University is also part of my family's legacy, since my father worked on his M.A. here and my daughter and my siblings all graduated from the University. I feel you have to decide how you want to participate in your community, and the University was and is the right place for me to participate.

You're also involved in other aspects of campus. Tell us about those experiences.

I'm a trustee emeritus for the University of Nevada, Reno Foundation and it was my honor to serve as a trustee. I was its chairman from 1993-94. I believe in the University's mission and feel that it provides an incredible benefit to the state. And it's a huge economic driver for Washoe County.

I was honored to be named a Distinguished Nevadan in 2016. So, I've continued to benefit greatly from my relationship with the University.

What advice would you give recent college graduates who are just starting out in the professional world?

Probably the most important thing that I've learned is to find something you really love and want to do. If the first choice isn't right, change it. If the second choice isn't right, don't be afraid to change again. Keep looking for what makes you happy until you find it.

For 25 years I've had the best job I could ever hope to achieve. I've learned that you need to do what you want to do. Whatever success I've enjoyed has been predicated upon the education I received from the University and what I have continued to learn from my ongoing association with the University, especially as I go on with the next chapter in my life. N arly in my career, I knew I wanted to create opportunities that help people reach their full potential. With that purpose in mind, I studied political science and economics, and in one of my first jobs, I worked in the legislature of my home state of Pennsylvania. I focused on higher education and helping people to earn a living wage and meet health care needs. Along the way, I began to understand the power that higher education provides for people to better their lives.

When I arrived at the University in 2003, it was clear to me that Nevada was on the move. Through innovative programs like former College of Education Dean Bill Sparkman's Dean's Future Scholars program and, later, Vice President for Student Services Shannon Ellis' First in the Pack program, we reached beyond our front door with the goal to make sure dedicated and deserving students who wanted a Nevada education had the opportunity. These students brought talent, diligence, and perseverance to campus, demonstrating their ability to excel. My job was to tell the story of these hardworking students who rely on our donors to create their opportunity.

This is where philanthropy makes a difference. In my time, the generosity of alumni, friends, and community partners, who all share our belief that a Nevada education transforms lives, have assisted in funding seven new buildings and established more than 600 endowments to improve the Wolf Pack experience. Donor contributions enrich every aspect of University life, on every corner of campus and beyond. Our donors support tuition and books, original research projects, faculty, programs, events, athletics, and even making sure our students have nutritious meals.

Donor contributions enrich every aspect of University life, on every corner of campus and beyond.

John Carothers, whose 16-year stewardship of the University's philanthropic effort as vice president for Development & Alumni Relations and executive director of the University of Nevada, Reno Foundation has seen record-setting achievement, announced his retirement effective Jan. 31, 2020.

Jeff Dow

It has been an honor to see and share the impact of philanthropy. I have watched donors turn their hopes for the future into reality, and I have listened to countless students who told me that receiving a scholarship has meant that they can continue to strive for their dreams. I hope others who haven't had the chance will consider creating opportunities through philanthropic gifts for those on campus now, and those who will join their ranks in the years to come. I can tell you from my personal and professional experiences that the act of giving is as meaningful and powerful for the person who gives the gift as it is for the one who receives it.

Thank you for the opportunity to serve the Wolf Pack family.

JOHN K. CAROTHERS ENDOWMENT FOR LITERACY

To honor his more than 16 years of service to the University of Nevada, Reno Foundation, the John K. Carothers Endowment for Literacy has been established to benefit the E.L. Cord Foundation Center for Learning and Literacy. Carothers' stewardship of the University's philanthropic efforts has seen record-setting achievement, including the growth of the Foundation's endowment from $57 million in 2004 to $232 million in 2019, with the addition of more than 600 new endowment funds. Carothers, who had a difficult time learning to read as a child, has had a lifelong interest in literacy support services that benefit the neurodiverse population.

MESSAGE FROM THE INTERIM EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

UNIVERSITY OF NEVADA, RENO FOUNDATION

Throughout my 26 years of experience on our beautiful University campus, I have always been inspired by the enthusiasm of our alumni and friends to support our students and faculty, and the many other projects and initiatives that their philanthropy makes possible. As I take on the role of interim executive director for the University of Nevada, Reno Foundation during this unprecedented time while we are faced with the novel Coronavirus pandemic, I am encouraged that, together, we will persevere through this challenge. Even now, we continue to provide our students exceptional learning opportunities through online delivery of courses, and we continue to provide numerous avenues of assistance through student support funds and programs.

During these extraordinary times, it is heartening to appreciate the amazing things we have recently accomplished. As a Carnegie R1 Research Institution, the University is a source of new ideas, and these ideas are fueled by our donors' willingness to give. In the last year, the Foundation's total endowment has reached more than $232 million. We established an additional 47 new endowment funds in 2019, which provide a broad range of assistance from student scholarships to faculty and program support. It's because of such generosity that we are looking forward to the opening of the new William N. Pennington Engineering building for the fall 2020 semester, ushering in a new era of technology and learning to aid in solving the grand challenges ahead of us.

At the heart of our great institution is you — embracing our mission to provide outstanding learning, discovery and engagement programs that serve the economic, social, environmental and cultural needs of the citizens of Nevada. I am honored to take on this new role and I look forward to working together with our alumni, friends and community partners toward the common goal of supporting our great university. Together, we will remain a strong and vibrant educational community aiding our region and beyond.

I am deeply grateful to our entire Wolf Pack family and for your continued support and dedication to the success of our University.

MESSAGE FROM THE 2020 FOUNDATION CHAIR

UNIVERSITY OF NEVADA, RENO FOUNDATION

I am deeply honored to serve as the 2020 University of Nevada, Reno Foundation chair of the board of trustees. Behind John Carothers' steadfast leadership, the Foundation's endowment grew from $57 million in 2004 to in excess of $232 million in 2019. John's commitment to the University's success ensured that the necessary resources were available as our student population grew and our academic offerings expanded. Now, we are embarking on a new era at the University, and I am grateful to be in a position to help our institution navigate toward its educational and philanthropic goals, even though the uncertain times we face due to the coronavirus.

As we continue toward our $500 million goal for Building What Comes Next: The Campaign for the New Nevada, I strongly believe in the ability of our board members, our alumni, our faculty and our community to join together and achieve this goal, just as we have achieved the milestone of becoming an R1 Carnegie Research Institution. This recognition, along with the recent announcement that the University has been awarded the Carnegie Community Engagement Classification and its designation by the Department of Education as an emerging Hispanic Serving Institute, is a testament to our faculty and students' dedication to learning, discovery and engagement on our campus and throughout our region.

As the Foundation chair, I take seriously my responsibility to Nevada and I look forward to stewarding another year of collaboration with our community partners. Together, we have raised $407.4 million so far, and I know we will work diligently to reach our goal of $500 million, as we work through the challenges of the pandemic and create a pathway to welcoming students back when we reopen campus. Your unwavering support has had a powerful impact on so many lives, and I look forward to working together to create a brighter future for us all.

Sincerely

We are grateful to our friends, alumni and community partners who established new endowments in 2019. Establishing an endowed fund at the University of Nevada, Reno Foundation transforms lives — those of the students who will become tomorrow's leaders, the faculty who inspire them and the researchers who are finding solutions to society's problems.

The Foundation manages the endowment funds, with available earnings transferred to the respective University accounts for the purpose of supporting the donor's passion, whether it be student scholarships, faculty research or unrestricted funds to meet the University's most pressing needs. Gifts can be focused or wide-ranging.

The process for establishing an endowment is simple and requires only a completed agreement along with a gift or pledge of at least $10,000. If you are interested in supporting any of these new endowments or creating one in memory or honor of a loved one, through outright gifts using almost any type of asset — cash, securities, real estate or other property that can be liquidated — please contact Keiko Weil '87, '18 M.A., director of donor relations, (775) 784-1587 or kweil@unr.edu.

Alumni, faculty, parents and friends of Nevada who make endowment gifts are attracted to the opportunity to ensure that the institution, or a particular program or activity, will exist in perpetuity. Behind each endowment gift is a personal motivation — to repay a debt of gratitude for the donor's own education, to honor a loved one and/or to make a positive impact. Endowments may be established through outright gifts that are available for immediate investment by the University, life income gifts, in which the University receives money immediately while providing the donor or a designee with an income for life, or bequests that the University receives after the donor's passing. We are grateful to the many individuals and organizations who have established these permanent endowment funds at Nevada.

ESTABLISHING AN ENDOWMENT

To create an endowment, all you need is a minimum gift of $10,000 and a signed agreement. An endowment is a permanent fund established for a specific purpose — faculty, student or program support. Gifts to endowments of cash, securities, real estate, or through a planned gift or bequest are invested to create a lasting resource that grows in perpetuity, generating a steady stream of income while leaving the principal untouched. To learn more about supporting existing endowments at Nevada or establishing a new endowment, please visit our endowment webpage at www.unr.edu/giving.

WHY ARE ENDOWMENTS SO IMPORTANT?

An endowment refers to assets that are invested in perpetuity, unlike expendable funds that are typically used for immediate needs. The University's endowment is not a single "pot" of money that can be used as the University wishes. Many separate endowed funds comprise the endowment, each with its own stipulations about how the income may be used, as agreed upon by the University and the donor.

As the University's endowment grows through prudent investment management and gifts, it ensures the strength and resiliency of the University. Endowment income provides stability against downturns in the economy, budget cuts and other changes.

To learn more about supporting existing endowments at Nevada or establishing a new endowment, please visit our endowment webpage at www.unr.edu/giving.

International Development Missions, Inc. is a grassroots nonprofit organization created with the idea of helping people in need. IDM works to enhance the health and quality of life for people in developing countries, and has established this endowment to provide tuition assistance for students studying foundational issues in developing countries in the areas of health. IDM strongly believes in and supports education.

We are grateful to those who have created endowments with the Nevada System of Higher Education (NSHE) for the benefit of the University of Nevada, Reno. Most of these endowments have been supporting Nevada's students and programs for decades and have grown to provide substantial available earnings. ENDOW A LEGACY

A gift to endow a faculty position makes a lasting contribution to strengthen the University. The gift will help recruit leading professors and secure a solid education for our students, who will reap the benefits of such gifts.

A named chair or professorship goes on for as long as the University endures. It becomes a tradition unto itself, developing its character and reputation, not just for the donors, but for the faculty holders of the position. To learn more about establishing an endowment at Nevada, please visit our endowment webpage at www.unr.edu/giving.

Faculty and Staff

Thank you to the faculty and staff who generously help build the new Nevada. Gifts from our faculty and staff tell our alumni and friends that those closest to the University—those who know it best—believe so strongly in the success of Nevada and its students that they willingly support it not just on the job, but also through personal philanthropy. Faculty and staff see firsthand the difference private support makes, and choose to support programs across campus, often through payroll deduction. We are grateful to these current, emeriti and former faculty and staff, or their surviving spouses, who made a gift to Nevada during 2019.

Dean Debera Thomas establishes scholarship for nursing students

Debera Thomas, dean of the Orvis School of Nursing. Theresa Danna

Dean Debera Thomas has established the Accelerated 2nd Degree BSN Scholarship Endowment Fund in support of nursing students in a new program, the Accelerated 2nd Degree Bachelor of Science in Nursing, which launched in January 2020. In response to Nevada's nurse shortage, this program condenses a typical two-year course of study into 12 months and the scholarship will support students in their rigorous full-time coursework. Thomas was appointed the dean of the Orvis School of Nursing in July 2018 after serving as the dean of the School of Nursing and the interim dean of the College of Health and Human Services at Northern Arizona University.

For more information on supporting students in the Orvis School of Nursing, please contact Jillian Szewczak, assistant director of development, at (775) 682-7178 or jszewczak@unr.edu.

Nevada Alumni Association Members

Tradition starts here, and Nevada Alumni Association members help build our traditions. Membership support makes it possible to host events for alumni and friends each year, provide scholarships for current Nevada students, build and sustain our network of more than 19 chapters, and make sure we keep the Wolf Pack community connected and engaged with the University we love. To learn more about Nevada Alumni Association membership, visit us online at unr.edu/alumni, and consider joining us in ensuring the tradition lives on. And to our loyal members – thank you!

ALUMNI

Many alumni chose to make gifts to their class fund, to scholarships and to programs throughout campus. This philanthropy is an important and vital source of funding, and alumni giving makes a difference. U.S. News & World Report uses yearly alumni participation as a measure of alumni involvement for its annual rankings. In 2019, Nevada was again ranked in the top tier of “Best National Universities.” We are grateful to these former students who made a gift during 2019.

Longtime University supporter Keith Lee '65 (physics) and his wife, Gloria, have given a gift to the football team's Eat to Win program. Lee has a long history with the Pack. He played football from 1961-63 for Coach Dick Trachok and served as student body president from 1964-65. Lee also served as chair of the University of Nevada, Reno Foundation and is a trustee emeritus. He currently serves on the College of Science Advisory Board. Lee was named a Distinguished Nevadan in 2014. The Eat to Win program provides players with a variety of nutritional resources, including training table meals, nutritional snacks and supplements, and post-workout smoothies, ensuring they reach their full potential in competition and in the classroom. The Lees are recognized in the University's Honor Court as Silver Benefactors.

For more information on supporting Wolf Pack student-athletes, contact James Sewell, Development Director, Athletics, at (775) 682-6983 or jamessewell@unr.edu.

The Dean and Claudia Byrne Family Scholarship Endowment established

Claudia and Dean Byrne '04 have recently established the Dean and Claudia Byrne Family Scholarship Endowment. 📷 Theresa Danna

Dean '04 (finance) and Claudia Byrne have established the Dean and Claudia Byrne Family Scholarship Endowment in honor of Dean's father, Robert Byrne '60 (business administration), and to support students in the College of Business who have made sacrifices to further their education with the support of their family and friends. Dean, Claudia and the Byrne family have a long history of supporting the University's students and programs. Dean is a trustee of the University of Nevada, Reno Foundation and is an esteemed member of the College of Business Advisory Board.

🗨️ For more information on supporting students in the College of Business, contact Zack Madonick, director of development, at (775) 682-6041 or madonick@unr.edu; or contact Danielle Pawliw, assistant director of development, at (775) 682-6556 or dpawliw@unr.edu.

Room 8 Scholarship Endowment in Theatre established

Cathy Gabrielli '79 and Bob Gabrielli '78. Courtesy of Bob Gabrielli

This scholarship will support students pursuing a major or minor in theatre or musical theatre. Bob Gabrielli '78 (journalism) and his wife, Cathy (Grundner) Gabrielli '79 (speech/theatre), have many fond memories of time spent in Room 8 of Church Fine Arts, the primary theatre classroom in the 1970s, during their time as undergraduates. They have established this scholarship to support students who similarly display a passion and a joy for the craft.

To learn more about supporting students in the School of the Arts, please contact Julie Mathews, director of development, at (775) 784-6873 or juliem@unr.edu; or Stephanie Sellers, director of development, at (775) 784-1222 or sesellers@unr.edu.

Alumni

will you rise to the challenge?

The Challenge:

Secure the legacy of your graduating class and/or decade by contributing to your class fund.

The Reward:

Once your class or decade fund reaches $10,000, it becomes a permanent endowment that benefits generations of students following in your footsteps.

Why Give?

- 1 It is a Nevada tradition. 2 No gift is too small because participation is key. Every dollar donated increased the power of your class or decade fund to secure the future of the University and the community it serves.
- 3 Alumni gifts tell the world how proud you are to be part of the Pack.
- 4 Your gifts matter. 5 Your gift might be doubled – or even tripled – if your employer has a matching gifts program. To find matching gift companies, visit www.unr.edu/giving/ways-to-give/matching-gifts.

Remember, every gift counts toward Building What Comes Next: The Campaign for the New Nevada.

How can you rise to the challenge?

Visit www.unr.edu/new-nevada and click on “Give to the Campaign.” Contact Torrey Hood, director of annual giving, at (775) 682-6544 or torreyhood@unr.edu.

The Bob Felten Scholarship Endowment established

Strategic Communications Professor Emeritus Bob Felten '71.

 Courtesy of the Reynolds School of Journalism

Now an emeritus faculty member, Professor Bob Felten '71 (journalism) taught and mentored students in the Reynolds School of Journalism for nearly 30 years. He served on the boards of the American Marketing Association and the American Advertising Federation, advocating for progress within the industry and acting as a bridge between these organizations and the University. The scholarship was established by John E. Brodeur '72 (journalism) and other generous donors who gave gifts through the Bob Felten Scholarship Crowdfund Nevada campaign to honor Felten's years of service. The scholarship will be awarded to students pursuing a degree in journalism with an emphasis on strategic communication.

 To learn more about supporting students in the Reynolds School of Journalism, contact Laurice Antoun-Becker, director of development, at (775) 784-4184 or lantounbecker@unr.edu.

Parents

Thank you, parents, for your generous support. Parents of alumni and current students generously support the Parents Fund and other programs throughout campus. The Parents Fund provides for student support programs that benefit the general educational experience and the quality of life of the student body. We are grateful to these parents who made a gift to Nevada during 2019.

The 2020 Planned Giving Advisory Council

The University of Nevada, Reno continues to work toward the goal of raising $500 million during the comprehensive campaign – Building What Comes Next: The Campaign for the New Nevada. A critical partner in the success of the campaign is the Planned Giving Advisory Council which is comprised of some of the best and most highly regarded professionals in northern Nevada. The volunteer council, which includes accountants, attorneys, financial planners and others in fields related to planned giving, meets quarterly to learn about University projects, programs and initiatives that may be of interest to their clients as they make decisions about wealth management and estate planning. With this knowledge, council members serve as ambassadors to the greater community and work to increase community engagement with the University.

The 2020 Planned Giving Advisory Council Chair is wealth advisor Heidi Foster '12 MBA. Foster received her bachelor's degree in business administration with an emphasis on finance from the University of Southern California and then obtained her MBA from the University. In her role as vice president of American Wealth Management, Foster works closely with her clients to design, implement and monitor comprehensive, multigenerational wealth management strategies. Foster was honored in 2010 by the Reno Gazette-Journal and the Reno Tahoe Young Professionals Network for being an exceptional leader with the Twenty Under 40 Award.

"I am thrilled and honored to lead the University's Planned Giving Advisory Council this year. I have thoroughly enjoyed being a part of this group since its formation 16 years ago. I never cease to be amazed at the incredible work being accomplished at the University. The pride I feel as a graduate from the MBA program grows with each presentation we receive. I, like the other advisors on the council, find joy in connecting projects where we hear funding is needed with clients who have a passion for the work being done. The group of advisors are all collaborative and congenial as we strive to support future achievements at the University, the research done within, and the students' overall success," Foster said.

We are grateful for the ongoing assistance of the members of the Planned Giving Advisory Council. Their support and confidence in our programs, leadership, faculty and facilities is important to us as we chart a transformational path for the University of Nevada, Reno.

For more information, please see the Office of Planned Giving's website: unrlegacy.org. Curated by Lisa Riley, director of planned giving, and Brian Saeman '98, director of development, the website provides in-depth information on the benefits of planned gifts, sample bequest language, and calculators designed to help users determine valuations. The website also provides an up-to-date listing of current and emeriti Planned Giving Advisory Council members.

Thank you, University friends, for your generous support. Our friends have a special appreciation of and affinity for the University and its mission of education, research and outreach. They give to programs, to scholarships and to new and existing endowments, often giving in honor of, or in memory of, a special person (see New Foundation Endowments starting on Page 32, or existing Foundation Endowments starting on Page 36). We are grateful to these Nevada friends who made a gift during 2019.

John Gancarek Social Work Scholarship Endowment supports students in the School of Social Work

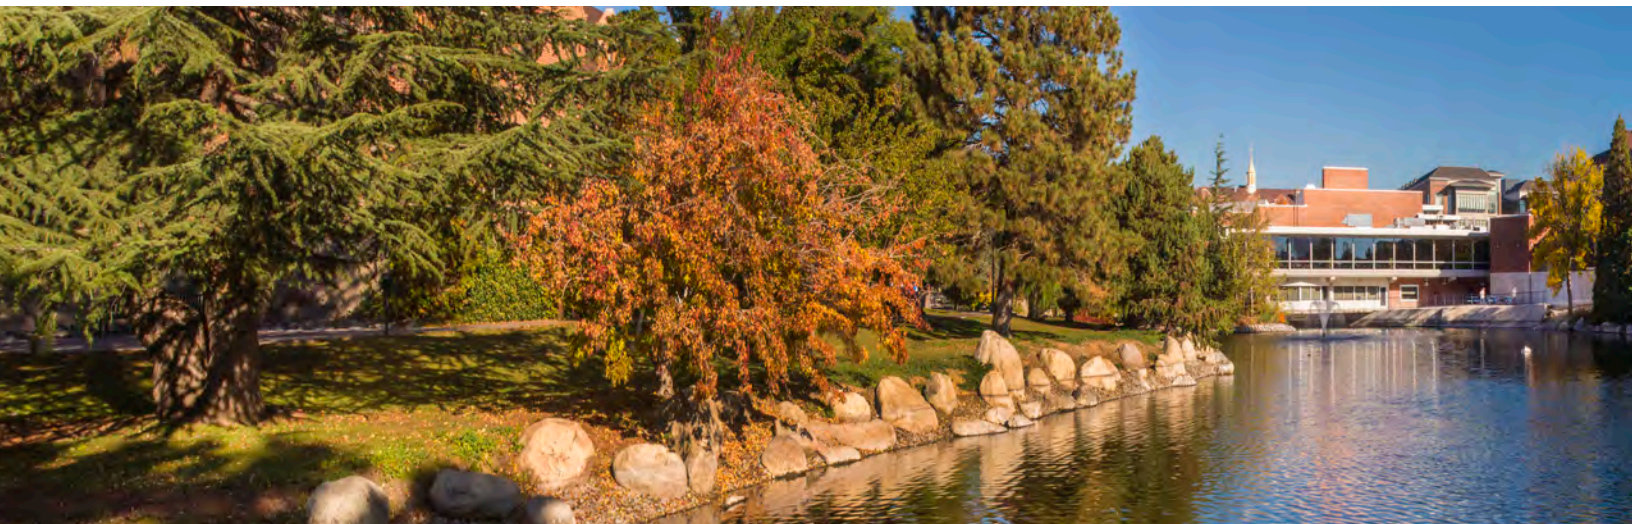

The late John Gancarek.  Courtesy Michael Capello

The late John Gancarek served the children and families in the Washoe County community for 26 years. Remembered as compassionate and a great listener, he retired from Washoe County Department of Social Services in 2007. His many professional accomplishments include helping to establish The Children's Cabinet, which is committed to keeping children safe and families together by providing services and resources that address their unmet needs. To honor Gancarek's memory and to foster his values in others, Michael Capello '82 (social work), '91 M.S., the retired director for the Department of Social Services, and John's colleagues and friends established the John Gancarek Social Work Scholarship Endowment for students in the School of Social Work.

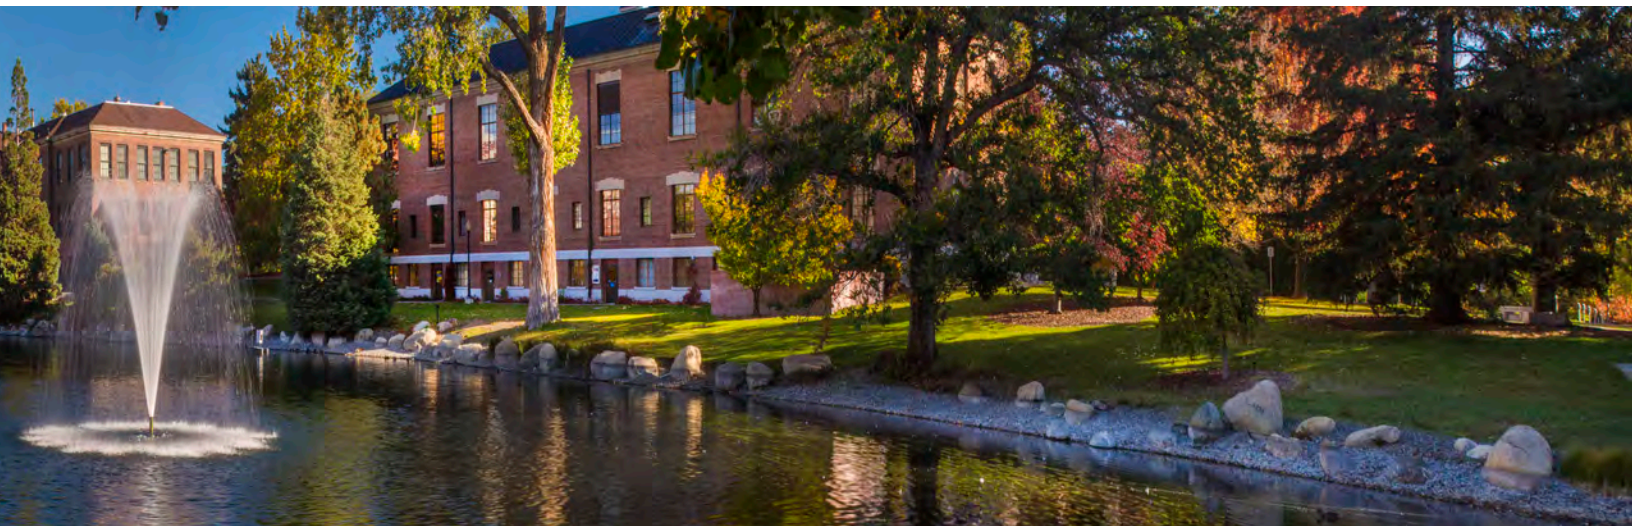

To learn more about supporting students in the School of Social Work, contact Jillian Szewczak, assistant director of development, at (775) 682-7178 or jszewczak@unr.edu.

John Louis “Lou” Yelland Scholarship Endowment established

The late John Louis “Lou” Yelland. Courtesy the Bezmarevich family

The Bezmarevich family has established this scholarship to support students in the College of Agriculture, Biotechnology & Natural Resources whose studies help prepare them for careers that promote sustainable farming, ranching and natural resource management. The scholarship has been established by Rudy and Joanne Bezmarevich to honor the life and values of their uncle, the late Lou Yelland, a Spring Valley, Nev. rancher.

To learn more about supporting students in the College of Agriculture, Biotechnology & Natural Resources, please contact Mitch Klaich, director of development, at (775) 682-6490 or mklaich@unr.edu.

Wilkinson Family Selco Scholarship Endowment established

William J. Wilkinson, the founder of Selco Products Company.  Courtesy of Selco Products Company

The Wilkinson family and Selco Products Company have recently established this scholarship to support students pursuing an undergraduate degree in the College of Engineering. William J. Wilkinson founded Selco Products Company in 1958 with a mission to provide customers with the right product, design and technology to make life better for all. Selco has called Nevada home since 2009. Through the establishment of the Wilkinson Family Selco Scholarship Endowment, the family and company will support the academic endeavors of students who demonstrate a commitment to excellence in engineering and business. Selco believes its service makes the difference, to its customers, its employees, and the community.

 For more information on supporting students in the College of Engineering, contact Flynn Ginty, director of development, at (775) 682-7696 or fginty@unr.edu.

Russell Church supports University's Special Collections

J.E. Church in the Sierra in 1906. Courtesy University of Nevada, Reno Special Collections

Russell Church, grandson of J. E. Church, has made a gift to support the digitization of the Church collection, held by the University Libraries' Special Collections and University Archives Department. Recently, Russell, his son Ken, and Ken's wife Tina, traveled from the east coast to spend time with the items in the J. E. Church collection, which include the papers, field journals and a host of other materials from Church's time as a professor on campus. J. E. Church graduated from the University in 1892 in arts & science, received an honorary degree in 1937, and is the inventor of the snowpack surveying method that is still in use today. He is the namesake for the Church Fine Arts building.

To learn more about supporting Special Collections, contact Robin Monteith, associate director of development, at (775) 682-5656 or robinmonteith@unr.edu.

HONOR COURT

The University of Nevada, Reno Honor Court was dedicated in 1997 and celebrates the contributions of campus and community leaders. The Honor Court is situated at the south end of campus adjacent to the University's historic Quadrangle, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Each year, names are engraved into the Honor Court in proud recognition of the accomplishments and support of those who contribute to excellence at the University. Individuals and organizations receiving the University's most prestigious awards or contributing major donations to the institution are recognized.

A decade of excellence

by CHAD HARTLEY '03

The 2010s decade marked a significant period of achievement and advancement for the intercollegiate athletics program at the University of Nevada. A look back at the decade revealed indelible memories, remarkable progress and incredible successes, both in competition and in the classroom, with multiple championships along the way.

As Nevada closes the door on the 2010s and opens to the 2020s, it does so with a remarkable number in tow: a record-high graduation rate of 85% for its student-athletes. Let's take a look back at some of the key moments of the decade:

The 2010s began with the pinnacle of Wolf Pack football as Chris Ault's 2010 Dream Team, led by senior quarterback Colin Kaepernick, toppled No. 3 Boise State in the Blue Friday game at Mackay Stadium. The Pack would roll on to a WAC Championship and a win over Boston College in the Kraft Fight Hunger Bowl as 30,000-plus Nevada fans took over San Francisco for the bowl game. When the dust settled, Nevada had produced the most wins in school history and the highest ranking in program history with a 13-1 mark and a No. 11 slot in the final AP Top 25.

On July 1, 2012, the University of Nevada officially became a member of the Mountain West Conference, the third league in the school's Division I-A/FBS history. The Wolf Pack baseball team would capture the school's first-ever MW title in 2015, followed in short order by swimming and diving in 2016 and three-straight seasons of Men's Basketball championships. baseball title coming in 2018, Nevada has to date won seven conference championships in its eighth year now as a MW member.

One of the greatest accomplishments, not just in the decade, but in the history of Wolf Pack athletics, came in March of 2016 when sophomore diver Sharae Zheng made history by capturing a pair of gold medals in the NCAA Championships. She captured the title in the 1-meter and 3-meter springboard events to become Nevada's first national champion since 2002 and the NCAA's Diver of the Year. Her coach, Jian Li You, was the NCAA Diving Coach of the Year in 2016 as well. Zheng is one of 11 Nevada athletes to ever win a national championship.

In the span of a year between October 2016 and October 2017, the Wolf Pack saw two of its former athletes give transformative gifts back to the University. First came a million-dollar gift from Ramon Sessions towards the development of what is now known as the Ramon Sessions Basketball Performance Center, one of the top hoops practice facilities in the West. Then came another seven-figure gift from Don Weir to lead the way for phased renovations at Don Weir Field at Peccole Park.

The decade saw the resurgence of the Wolf Pack Men's Basketball team, beginning with a CBI championship in 2016, which paved the way for Nevada's current streak of three-straight NCAA Tournament appearances and Mountain West regular season titles. In March of 2018, Nevada reached the height of its basketball success to date with a 22-point comeback against Cincinnati in the second-round of the NCAA Tournament to reach the second ever Sweet 16 in school history.

The final competition of the decade for Nevada was Dec. 29, 2019 as the Wolf Pack Women's Basketball team scored a 71-40 victory over Cal Poly at Lawlor Events Center. The 2020s opened with the Nevada Men's Basketball team defeating Colorado State, 67-61 at Lawlor. N

📷 Brin Reynolds '12, '15 MBA

Over its 51-year history, the University of Nevada, Reno School of Medicine has established itself as a force in health care—transforming health care learners into health care leaders, driving biomedical research, providing critical sources of patient care and contributing to the quality of life in our communities. UNR Med is now looking ahead to 2020 and beyond, focusing on key health care partnerships to bring new clinical and academic programs to the northern Nevada community.

UNIVERSITY HEALTH, UNR Med's clinical practice, has officially moved into the community, with our new internal medicine location at 6130 Plumas Street in Reno. The nearly 13,000-square-foot modern health care facility provides a patient-centric experience. The office provides adult medicine services with our department of internal medicine faculty and resident physicians, and older adult specialty care with the Sanford Geriatrics Specialty Care services. New patients are welcome, and all patients can make an appointment and confirm insurance coverage by calling (775) 327-5000.

In addition to internal medicine and geriatric services at Plumas Street, University Health offers a full suite of health care services including, family medicine, endocrinology, women's health, pediatrics, and dermatology on campus. Psychiatry and behavioral services are offered at 5190 Neil Road, suite 215, in the US Bank building near Meadowood Mall. New patients are welcome at all locations. To view services and locations, visit med.unr.edu/university-health.

The commitment of UNR Med to the community is reciprocated by the community through substantial philanthropy and the volunteerism of community physicians and health care professionals. The relationship between the school and the community is truly synergistic as each supports the other in enhancing the quality and access of health care in northern Nevada.

This relationship is evident with the anticipated opening of new University Health clinical services in a 60,000-square-foot facility at 745 West Moana Lane in late 2020. The facility will also offer patient-centered care to northern Nevadans, while enhancing UNR Med's medical education programs. Clinical services will include family medicine, women's health, mental health, diabetes and endocrinology, lab and X-ray, as well as clinical research and medical education resources.

SANFORD CENTER FOR AGING is engaging with community partners to create an interprofessional geriatrics education network to improve health outcomes for elder Nevadans through a five-year, $3.2 million federal grant from the U.S. Health Resources and Services Administration's Geriatrics Workforce Enhancement Program to launch ICECAP Nevada (Improving Care of Elders through Community and Academic Partnerships). To learn more, visit med.unr.edu/aging.

A NEW CLINICAL RESEARCH CENTER opened at the Center for Molecular Medicine at UNR Med that will enhance the quality of care in northern Nevada. The CRC will facilitate investigator-initiated clinical research that will produce innovative discoveries and serve the community's health care needs through clinical trials and other research studies. northern Nevadans will have opportunities to volunteer and participate in clinical trials conducted by scientists carrying out independent clinical, translational and educational research locally at the School of Medicine.

CARDIOVASCULAR DISEASE RESEARCH is being advanced through a new interdisciplinary research center being developed at the University of Nevada, Reno. Supported by an $11 million, five-year grant through the Centers of Biomedical Research Excellence (COBRE), a highly competitive program of the National Institutes of Health, the Center for Molecular and Cellular Signal Transduction in the Cardiovascular System is the first cardiovascular basic science-focused center in Nevada. UNR Med's Scott Earley, Ph.D., is the center's program director. The COBRE grant program is a powerful way to bring together several scientists, labs and facilities to focus on a specific group of diseases.

DIVERSITY, INCLUSION AND RESPECT is at the core of UNR Med's mission. UNR Med recognizes that diversity promotes excellence in education, research and health care. UNR Med is an inclusive and engaged community and recognizes the added value that students, faculty and staff from different backgrounds bring to the educational and patient experience. We strive to develop culturally sensitive and enlightened medical school graduates to care for all Nevadans, improve access to health care, and reduce health care disparities.

UNR Med is leveraging our extraordinary history as Nevada's first medical school with laser-like focus, energy and momentum. While capitalizing on the tremendous opportunity of serving northern Nevada, we are also preparing for what comes next. We invite you to be part of groundbreaking achievements in transformational research and premier medical education and clinical care. ■

Giving Young Readers a Hand

by JESSE STONE.

The E.L. Cord Foundation Center for Learning and Literacy (CLL) helps around 200 elementary school students who struggle with reading and writing through outreach tutoring programs and undergraduate literacy methods courses each year.

With literacy being a critical skill for educational success, personal empowerment and quality of life past school walls, families often turn to the CLL to support their children's reading ability.

The CLL, located in the College of Education, has aimed to enhance literacy in Nevada since 1964. In 2017, The CLL added the "Wolf Pack Bots" robotics and literacy program. There is also a clinic tutoring program held at the center, and both of these tutoring programs are taught by faculty and facilitated by graduate students.

Relying on research-based literacy instruction and assessment, the CLL provides one-on-one tutoring sessions, videos of instruction and assessment, conferences with family members and comprehensive assessment reports.

Approximately 95% of the students in the Wolf Pack Bots program come from a background where a language besides English is spoken at home. The program is based around the First Lego League, with an annual Nevada First Lego League competition each December. Wolf Pack Bots teaches literacy, robotics and communication skills simultaneously.

In the clinic tutoring program, families can sign their children up for hour-long tutoring sessions twice a week. The program, held during fall, summer and spring semesters, serves English learners, students with specific reading and writing needs and students who thrive in one-on-one settings, with adapting instruction to individual students being crucial to the program. During the summer semester, students are treated to four one-hour sessions per week instead of two.

The CLL acts as a bridge between academic preparation programs for the College of Education and children within Washoe County. The CLL itself is a self-supporting space for clinical assessment and instruction, including a full library with digital tools used for both reading and writing such as iPads and computers.

The CLL has a Reading Buddies Outreach program, a mutually beneficial arrangement that helps younger students and their tutors, or "reading buddies."

"[Our reading buddy] is an excellent tutor," said one second grade teacher. "The students love her. She is always on time. She helps the students. She has great lesson plans prepared for the students. She communicates with me via email and in person. She gets excited about showing me what the students have done."

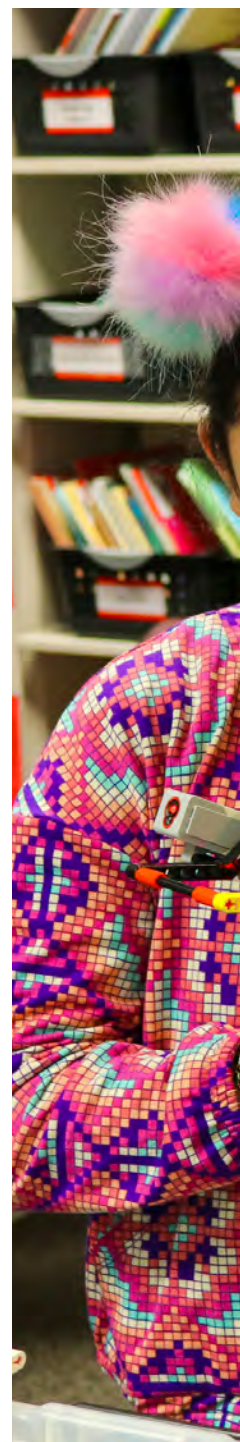

As elementary school students learn how to read and write themselves, teacher education students develop their literacy abilities in a real-world environment, receiving daily supervision.

"My favorite part of the program is being able to form a bond with the students I work with because that bond is what truly allows them to be themselves and not be embarrassed to actually use their full potential when it comes to activities and reading," said one reading buddy tutor.

Tutors at the program receive weekly feedback throughout the semester and provide in-depth assessment reports during family conferences.

"[Our reading buddy tutor] is always on time and ready to work with her buddies," said one first grade teacher. "She has a positive attitude and the students look forward to and are willing to work with her."

The CLL has increased the ability to provide scholarships for these programs for families but only because of donations. To learn more about the CLL, register a child for tutoring, or to support children and families in need of stipends and scholarships to attend these programs, visit www.unr.edu/ctl

OSEP awards $1.3 million to special education professor to advance interdisciplinary personnel preparation

by KRISTAN RUSSELL '19 M.A.

Grant awarded to Assistant Professor Lindsay Diamond in the College of Education to collaborate with Associate Professor Abbie Olszewski in the University of Nevada, Reno School of Medicine

Despite the increasing prevalence of autism spectrum disorder diagnoses in children, there is a statewide shortage of professionals qualified to provide high-quality services to young children with ASD. This is particularly true when it comes to service providers who have training in special education and speech pathology, disciplines that might seem different but complement each other when working with children who have ASD.

Given this need, the United States Department of Education through the Office of Special Education Programs has awarded $1.3 million to fund an interdisciplinary personnel preparation program for Early Childhood Special Education and Speech-Language Pathology scholars.

The grant was awarded to Project Director Lindsay Diamond, assistant professor of special education, and Co-Investigator Abbie Olszewski, associate professor of speech pathology and audiology.

“Even though we see an increase in the number of young children with autism who need services, we continue to experience a statewide shortage of ECSE teachers and speech-language service providers,” Diamond said. “In light of this shortage, we recognized the need to have both ECSEs and SLPs who are trained to provide interdisciplinary services for young children with ASD in northern Nevada.”

Nevada Guarantee program ensures income-qualified students receive a four-year degree with little to no student debt

One of the most successful and impactful higher education tuition programs in the state of Nevada is the Nevada Guarantee, a free University of Nevada, Reno tuition program for low-income Nevada residents, which includes the complete cost of tuition, fees and books plus all the academic and social support needed for graduating in four years or less.

“The Nevada Guarantee, formerly known as the Pack Advantage, has been in place for 10 years at the University of Nevada, Reno, and we have had around 10,000 students total go through the program with the opportunity to graduate debt-free,” Shannon Ellis, vice president of Student Services at the University, said. “As a land-grant institution, it is our mission to offer a quality, top-tier education to Nevada residents. This program is for all of those students who want a four-year degree. We want them to know they belong at this University and we are committed to do what it takes to get them here.”

The University’s goal is to offer a counter-narrative to the many reports centered on university and college students graduating with record amounts of debt. In fact, at the University, more than 50% of students graduating leave with no debt, and the total amount of scholarships and grants at the University is $87 million annually. In fall 2019, 81% of new freshmen received grants or scholarships. The University estimates that approximately 30% of high school students in Nevada currently qualify for the Nevada Guarantee.

“I thought for sure they were going to convince me to take out a student loan,” Yoni Covarrubias, a sophomore criminal justice major at the University of Nevada, Reno, said. “Like many first-generation college students my biggest hesitancy about going to college was money. When I walked out the doors of the University’s financial aid office, I had an entirely different perspective. I knew I was going to be a University student.”

Undergraduate research group examines homelessness in LGBTQ+ emerging adults

by KRISTAN RUSSELL '19 M.A.

More than 500,000 people have experienced homelessness within the past year in the United States. LGBTQ+ emerging adults are especially at risk to experience homelessness and are disproportionately overrepresented amongst the homeless population.

Service providers often fail to accommodate homeless LGBTQ+ individuals. Many housing services fail to offer a sufficient number of beds, while providers are often not properly trained to best serve this population. As such, LGBTQ+ homeless emerging adults may not fully benefit from the available resources.

Recognizing the lack of existing resources and driven by the desire to make an impact, undergraduates Julia Matos, Mackenzie Kent and Libby Rianda began an in-depth exploration into the experiences of LGBTQ+ homeless emerging adults.

“When you’re in a position of privilege it is important to go and help others,” Kent said, “which is why we’re so passionate about conducting research that can really help people who need it.”

The project is being conducted under the mentorship of College of Education Associate Professor Bridget Walsh. Their journey for this project began in Walsh’s HDFS 391 Research Methods course.

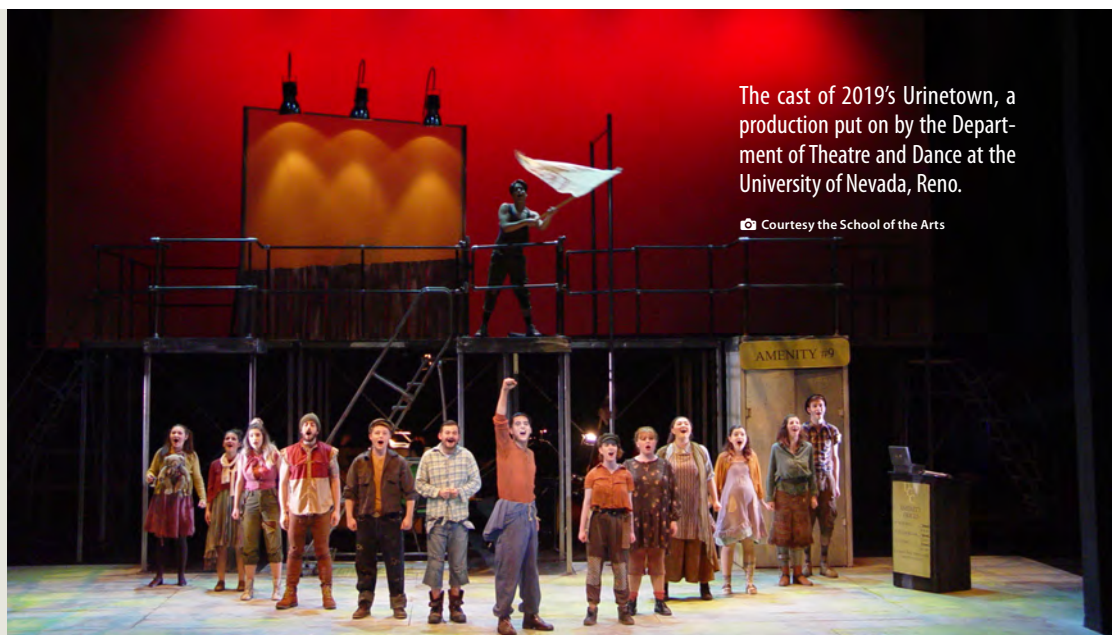

“Along with a few of their classmates, the students developed the proposal for the class,” Walsh said. “At the end of each semester, I select a team that has the aspiration and ability to implement the project under my auspices. This choice was a no-brainer. This team is made up of talented, capable and motivated undergraduate students.”

The students not only excelled within their research class, they impressed other members of the College of Education with their project.

“During their proposal, I was struck by the passion, knowledge, and sophistication of each student and their proposed project,” Melissa Burnham, professor of Human Development and Family Studies, said. “It’s incredibly fulfilling as a professor to watch undergraduate students catch the research bug. Having the opportunity to participate in undergraduate research provides students with access to possible futures they may not have imagined.”

A promising breakthrough against Streptococcus pneumoniae

Prestigious science journal publishes College of Science researchers' milestone findings

by DAVID STIPECH '85

When engaged in battle, a key tactic for defeating your enemies is disrupting their communication.

In the battle against deadly diseases that adapt quickly to resist today's top antibiotics, researchers from the University of Nevada, Reno's College of Science have shown that stopping bacterial cells from communicating can actually prevent them from amassing their lethal armies.

An article published in January 2020 in the prestigious Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences details the potentially game-changing research of University chemical biologist Yftah Tal-Gan and his team. Their breakthrough research studied "quorum-sensing" bacteria that synchronize the activities of large groups of cells by communicating via chemical signal molecules.

Following more than five years of re-

Results of research by chemical biologist Yftah Tal-Gan and his team may lead to medical advances to aid the treatment or prevention of deadly bacterial diseases like Streptococcus pneumoniae in the future.

 Courtesy University of Nevada, Reno search, the team successfully demonstrated that interrupting the deadly Streptococcus pneumoniae bacteria's communicative mechanism could lead to significant advances in medicine, eventually saving countless lives.

Streptococcus pneumoniae attacks compromised or undeveloped immune systems, making the elderly and children especially vulnerable. It is blamed for more than 22,000 deaths, 400,000 hospitalizations and $3.5 billion in health care costs annually in the United States alone – and an estimated 800,000 deaths globally among children age five and under.

"People don't realize it, but bacteria are smart – they communicate, they adapt," Tal-Gan said. "The big issue today is that Strep pneumoniae builds up resistance to drugs, making them stronger and rendering the antimicrobials ineffective. Through our research we have synthesized peptides (chains of amino acids) in a way that interrupts the bacteria's communication, keeping them from rallying their harmful forces and from initiating resistance to drug therapies."

Musical theatre stars are triple threats. They are talented performers who need to excel in acting, singing and dancing to rise to the top stages across the country.

The Department of Theatre and Dance at the University of Nevada, Reno announces the establishment an interdisciplinary Bachelor of Arts in musical theatre degree between the department and music program. It is the only such program offered in the state of Nevada. Nationwide, demand for such degrees outpace the spots available in many higher education institutions.

"Building this program will fill the need of numerous potential students who have left the state in pursuit of this training as well as offer local students a high-caliber musical theatre education at affordable tuition," Ann Archbold, chair of the Department of Theatre and Dance at the University, said. "The program helps align the University more closely with fellow R-1 universities, while offering the highest caliber training and preparation for students entering a deeply competitive field."

The program is taking shape where students will equally focus their classes on theatre, voice and dance. They will practice their craft with an academic and critical-thinking approach.

"Students pursuing this major will combine the artistic, cognitive and somatic skills necessary to enter the field as musical theatre practitioners and scholars," Archbold said. "In order to balance these skills, musical theatre majors will create, analyze and perform throughout their undergraduate careers."

Graduates of the program will have the practical experience to pursue a professional career in performance arts immediately. Northern Nevada audiences also will benefit, as future productions will feature a higher-caliber talent.

Department Chair Tin-Yau Tam on his growing Department of Mathematics & Statistics

by KARL FENDELANDER '06

“I like to build stuff,” said Tin-Yau Tam, who goes by T.Y. and joined the University on July 1, 2018. “I built my own house in Auburn, Ala. I think that’s my nature.” Before Tam came to the University of Nevada, Reno, he spent 30 years as a faculty member at Auburn University in Alabama, the last six of those as department chair. He now holds the Seneca C. and Mary B. Weeks Endowed Chair in Mathematics and sits as chair of the burgeoning Department of Mathematics and Statistics. It would be difficult to imagine a better person for the job.

Tam’s research interests are matrix theory and applications, multilinear algebra, numerical ranges and Lie Theory, making him a bit of a rarity in the world of mathematics, in which researchers typically choose one area of specialization. He serves on the editorial boards of three mathematics journals, has authored or coauthored more than 100 peer-reviewed articles, delivered over 200 talks and organized numerous international conferences. In the first half of the summer of 2019 alone, he traveled to China and Brazil to promote the department’s graduate programs and hosted a mathematics conference on campus, the 8th International Conference on Matrix Analysis and Applications.

ICMAA 2019 aimed to stimulate research and the interaction of mathematicians in all aspects of linear and multilinear algebra, matrix analysis, graph theory and their applications. Experts from 10 countries attended and were pleasantly surprised to find that, far from a desert wasteland, the Biggest Little City is a thriving and lovely mountain town, replete with a river running through it and, of course, a beautiful university campus. While welcoming the participants, Dean of the College of Science Jeff Thompson and Tam promoted the graduate programs, specifically the new doctoral programs.

The two programs were started in 2017, shortly before Tam’s arrival at the University. “We’re still building them,” he said of the programs, “but we have quite a number of Ph.D. students – around 25. We are still recruiting more. I like to produce students and do research with them.”

University joins Redfield Foundation, Eddy House to serve homeless youth

by NATALIE FRY '04

University of Nevada, Reno Executive Vice President and Provost Kevin Carman recently announced a new collaborative effort between the University, the Redfield Foundation and the Eddy House, a Reno nonprofit entity committed to serving homeless youth.

“Helping our community’s most vulnerable populations is a top priority for the Redfield Foundation and other philanthropic groups, and as a land-grant institution committed to community engagement, the University is a natural partner for these types of community projects,” Jerry Smith, president of the NellJ. Redfield Foundation, said. “I believe that this is just the kind of effort that will help define the University as a crucial partner in high impact community engagement.”

The University effort will involve students and faculty from various disciplines and will be led by Professor of Counseling and Educational Psychology Ken Coll. Coll served as dean of the College of Education from 2013 to 2019 and recently served as acting dean for the School of Social Work.

“This is truly a win-win initiative as it will address a critical need within our community while also providing extremely valuable practical experience for our students,” Provost Carman said. “Ken is uniquely qualified to lead this effort given his leadership skills, content expertise, campus and community connections and understanding of program development and philanthropy. This is a unique opportunity to develop and expand collaboration with community agencies in support of mental health needs.”

Bringing chemistry into K-12 classrooms

by JENNIFER THERESA KENT

Teaching Assistant Professor in the Department of Chemistry Krisztina Voronova's motto is simple: "Science is fun!" She teaches introductory chemistry lectures at the College of Science and is determined to pass on this adage to her students by demonstrating all the ways science and chemistry can be exciting, fascinating, even explosive.

Delighted by her enthusiasm, instructors from the University's NevadaTeach program, an undergraduate degree program that provides students pursuing STEM majors with the coursework and training to become science teachers at the middle and high school level, reached out to Voronova and presented an opportunity for one of their students to intern with her. The student, Kimberly Hernandez, is a rising senior set to graduate with a Bachelor of Science in chemistry as well as all the required coursework to pursue her teaching license. Voronova and Hernandez's mutual interest in science education helped spark the idea of creating a youth outreach program. They compiled a set of exciting chemistry-based experiments with a K-12 audience in mind.

In January 2019, after months of planning, they began reaching out to K-12 teachers and their students, inviting them to the Department of Chemistry labs on campus to experience the new Discover Chemistry Demonstration Series. The response to this initial outreach was extraordinary, and Voronova and Hernandez decided to keep the momentum going by expanding the demonstrations beyond the campus walls.

Assistant Professor Krisztina Voronova engages students with science lessons at Jessie Beck Elementary.

by Jennifer Theresa Kent

While continuing to perform demonstrations on campus, they also started visiting elementary, middle and high school classrooms throughout the Washoe County School District. By the summer of 2019, nearly 700 K-12 students had experienced the Discover Chemistry Demonstration Series, including students at Jessie Beck Elementary School, Depoali Middle School, Sky Ranch Middle School, and the Innovations Big Picture High School. One of their larger events was organized in collaboration with the Dean's Future Scholars program, an academic outreach program with the goal of increasing the number of low-income, first-generation students graduating from high school and gaining access to higher education.

FROM THE PRESIDENT
NEVADA ALUMNI COUNCIL

Dear fellow alumni,

These last few months have certainly not been the start of this new decade that we were all expecting. We have experienced unprecedented change and uncertainty as we navigate a new reality, and many sacrifices have been made for the well-being of our community. Although many tough and sometimes disappointing decisions have occurred in recent months, I could not be any prouder of my alma mater than I am right now. This community has continued to show its resilience and strength during this ever-changing situation and I know that we will make it out on the other side stronger than before.

For our graduating class of students getting ready to join your fellow alumni – we are so proud of your achievements and contributions to this great University. No matter how or when you celebrated graduation, you will always be a cherished member of this Wolf Pack family. We welcome you to this new chapter of your Nevada story with open arms and we cannot wait to connect with you for years to come.

Take care of each other and be well. Go Pack!

Capt. Kenneth Collins '89, commanding officer of the United States Navy Band and University of Nevada, Reno alumnus, conducts the Navy Concert Band during a performance at West Leyden High School in North Lake, Ill.

Adam Grimm, March 20, 2017/Released

National spotlight shines on Nevada alumnus Capt. Ken Collins '89 and the U.S. Navy Band

by DAVID STIPECH '85

University of Nevada, Reno alumnus Capt. Ken Collins '89 (music education) and the United States Navy Band, which he directs, were recently in the national spotlight, thanks to a CBS news segment. The piece profiled the band as it prepared for its annual holiday concert, generating an outpouring of positive feedback.

"I've received dozens of responses from friends and colleagues in the Navy that I have known over the past 30 years," Collins said. "Additionally, family and friends from across the country, some of whom I haven't heard from in years, reached out to say how much they enjoyed the segment."

Collins joined the Navy in 1989, a week after receiving his Bachelor of Music Education from the University. Over the years, he performed as a percussionist in various Navy fleet bands and went on to serve in an array of bandleader and conductor roles before reporting to his current assignment as commanding officer of the U.S. Navy Band in July 2015.

"People don't know what a prominent role the bands play in our nation's military," Collins said. "The U.S. Navy Band serves as musical ambassadors for the Navy, proudly representing the sailors serving around the globe. We help tell their stories and connect the American people to the men and women out there serving our nation every day."

While his parents modeled and supported a love for performing music—percussion, in his case—Collins credits University Music Professor Emeritus A.G. "Mack" McGranahan with his decision to pursue a career in music. Collins was further inspired by the U.S. Navy Band's 1988 campus appearance at Nightingale Concert Hall. He contacted the local Navy recruiter the next day, auditioned and was accepted.

"It instills such a great sense of Nevada pride when our alumni garner attention for the incredible things they do," School of the Arts Director Tamara Scronce said. "The visual and performing arts have been a vital part of the University of Nevada, Reno for well over 130 years. It is always wonderful to hear that a student from the arts was inspired by one of our exceptional professors to go out into the world and accomplish great things."

Collins is a proud Wolf Pack alumnus—speaking to Nevada's Pride of the Sierra Marching Band before the Nevada-Purdue football game last August, at the invitation of Professor and Director of Bands Reed Chamberlin. Collins' pride in leading the U.S. Navy Band is equally evident, reflected in his gratitude for the band's recent national attention.

"It was great to get the recognition for the band, allowing the public with a look behind the scenes at all the work our musicians put in to making a show happen," he said. "Not only was the band gratified by the coverage, but I'm hopeful it offered some inspiration to our fellow sailors and others in uniform."

The top graduate from each school and college are honored along with the Faculty Mentor who has had the greatest impact on their scholastic success at Nevada.

Edward R. Cruz

COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE, BIOTECHNOLOGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

GPA: 4.0

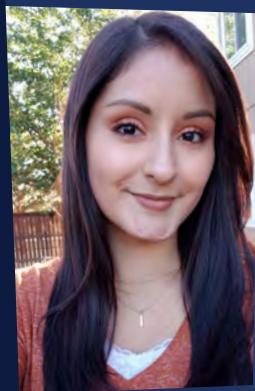

Mentor: Ian Wallace

Why the University of Nevada, Reno?

It offered the best resources to help me become an effective researcher and develop intellectually. I was able to start research early in my freshman year and received many other opportunities for professional development and funding.

Plans after graduation

I want to continue pursuing research, and I am excited to start my Ph.D. in molecular biology at Princeton University this coming fall! Eventually, I hope to teach at the university level.

Briana Esquivel

COLLEGE OF EDUCATION

GPA: 4.0

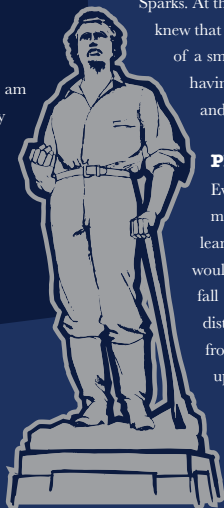

Mentor: Alicia Shaw '00, '16 M.S.

Why the University of Nevada, Reno?

I wanted to continue to grow and work in this community. I grew up in Sparks, Nevada and wanted to attend a college that would offer me the feeling and connectedness that I felt while growing up in Sparks. At the University of Nevada, Reno, I knew that I would be afforded the comforts of a small community feeling while still having access to countless resources and new opportunities for learning.

Plans after graduation

Everything is a bit up in the air at the moment with shutdowns and virtual learning, but in my ideal scenario, I would begin teaching this upcoming fall at an elementary school in the district. I hope to teach anywhere from 1st through 5th grade but am up for any challenge.

Derek D. Stratton

COLLEGE OF ENGINEERING

GPA: 4.0

Mentor: Emily Hand '13

Why the University of Nevada, Reno?

For a Nevadan, born and raised in Las Vegas, University of Nevada, Reno offered an excellent combination of a great computer science education, student resources and financial support, and the college experience of living on my own.

Plans after graduation

I plan to pursue a Ph.D. in Computer Science and Engineering at the University of Nevada, Reno under the mentorship of Dr. Emily Hand. My goal is to expand my knowledge of machine learning so I can create ideas and technologies in that domain that can positively influence peoples' lives.

Natashja K. Atherton

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

GPA: 4.0

Mentor: Jason Fissette

Why the University of Nevada, Reno?

I was raised in Reno, so I grew up around the Wolf Pack spirit. Nevada was the perfect choice for me, because it offered the clubs, education, and commitment to student success that I was looking for, was the smartest financial choice, is in an amazing location, and allowed me to stay close to family.

Plans after graduation

After graduation, I will be working as a legal assistant at a criminal defense firm while I study for the LSAT and apply to law school. I intend to travel to observe other criminal justice systems and explore different cultures. I will then attend a law school in California, Colorado, or Washington to ultimately become a prosecutor or public defender.

EST. 1874

Guglielmo G. Panelli

COLLEGE OF SCIENCE

GPA: 4.0 • Mentor: Andrei Derevianko

Why the University of Nevada, Reno?

I grew up in Las Vegas and knew I didn't want to stay there for college. Reno was the perfect refuge for me with Lake Tahoe in its backyard and an attractive in-state tuition price tag. A small yet incredibly active Department of Physics was the last element of convincing I needed to choose University of Nevada, Reno as my home for four years. This choice turned out to have a much higher return on investment than I could have ever imagined.

Plans after graduation

I will spend much of my summer continuing many of my research pursuits and completing other projects like creating video lectures for introductory physics courses and assisting in making changes to physics labs. In the fall, I will be saying good-bye to my mentors, colleagues, and friends at the University to begin my Ph.D. studies and research at Stanford University.

Sarah K. Belheir

ORVIS SCHOOL OF NURSING
GPA: 3.963
Mentor: Val Wedler

Why the University of Nevada, Reno?

After graduating high school, I knew I wanted the typical college experience, but still wanted to stay close to home. University of Nevada, Reno was the perfect choice for me since it was still in-state but was a fresh new city for me to experience.

Plans after graduation

After graduation I am moving back to Las Vegas and starting a new grad residency! I plan to become an oncology nurse and continue on to earn my Ph.D. Ultimately, I hope to become a research nurse and a nursing professor! I hope to inspire other nurses as the professors at Orvis have inspired me.

Katie M. Grinsell

REYNOLDS SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM
GPA: 3.945
Mentor: Luke Sorensen '12

Why the University of Nevada, Reno?

I chose to attend University of Nevada, Reno because after graduating from Reno High School, I still didn't have a clear path of what I wanted to do. I didn't want to go to an expensive out-of-state school without first knowing what path I was going to take. After getting all my core classes out of the way and exploring different majors and then finally finding the Reynolds School of Journalism, I knew I was happy I had stayed and gone to Nevada because it has led me to where I am now.

Plans after graduation

I currently work part-time at a video production company called Three Sticks Productions. After graduation, I plan on transitioning to full-time with them and improving my skills in video editing and production with my team there.

Brooke Z. Eriksen

SCHOOL OF COMMUNITY HEALTH SCIENCES
GPA: 4.0
Mentor: Nora Constantino '86 M.S.

Why the University of Nevada, Reno?

I chose to attend UNR because Reno is my home, and it was the best option for me financially since I received the National Merit scholarship. I also love the campus and the facilities at UNR.

Plans after graduation

I plan to become a certified yoga instructor and Physical Therapy technician. Eventually, I would like to continue my education in either public health or evolutionary biology.

Janna M. Ishikawa

SCHOOL OF MEDICINE,
SPEECH PATHOLOGY & AUDIOLOGY
GPA: 3.937
Mentor: Laura Archer '77, '80 M.Ed.

Why the University of Nevada, Reno?

I didn't want to travel too far from home but I also wanted attend a school that offered Speech Pathology as a major. When I heard about the University of Nevada, Reno from a friend who visited Reno often, I was interested in applying. I did some research and found that Reno is such a beautiful city and the University offered me everything I was looking for in a college. Once I decided to apply, I was set on this school.

Plans after graduation

After graduation I will be attending the University of Hawaii John A. Burns School of Medicine where I will be pursuing a master's degree in Communication Sciences and Disorders. I am excited to return home and continue my path to being a speech-language pathologist!

Nayeli Villalobos Rodriguez

THE COLLEGE OF BUSINESS
GPA: 4.0 • Mentor: Dana Edberg '80, '89 MBA

Why the University of Nevada, Reno?

When I toured the University of Nevada, Reno one spring day, I quickly realized I wanted to become part of the bright and lively community on campus. Ultimately, I knew the University of Nevada, Reno, would offer me the opportunity for personal and professional growth.

Plans after graduation

Following graduation, my plans are to gain experience in the field of Information Systems. I plan to apply what I have learned and gained more knowledge in a professional organization to then pursue my master's degree related to Information Systems.

Emily L. Morgan

SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK
GPA: 3.911 • Mentor: Colleen Tuttle

Why the University of Nevada, Reno?

I moved to Reno from a small town in Wyoming to be with a boy (yes we are still together and now engaged!). I had plans to attend college right after high school and University of Nevada, Reno just fell into place. It's been good to have this experience in a big city versus where I was raised.

Plans after graduation

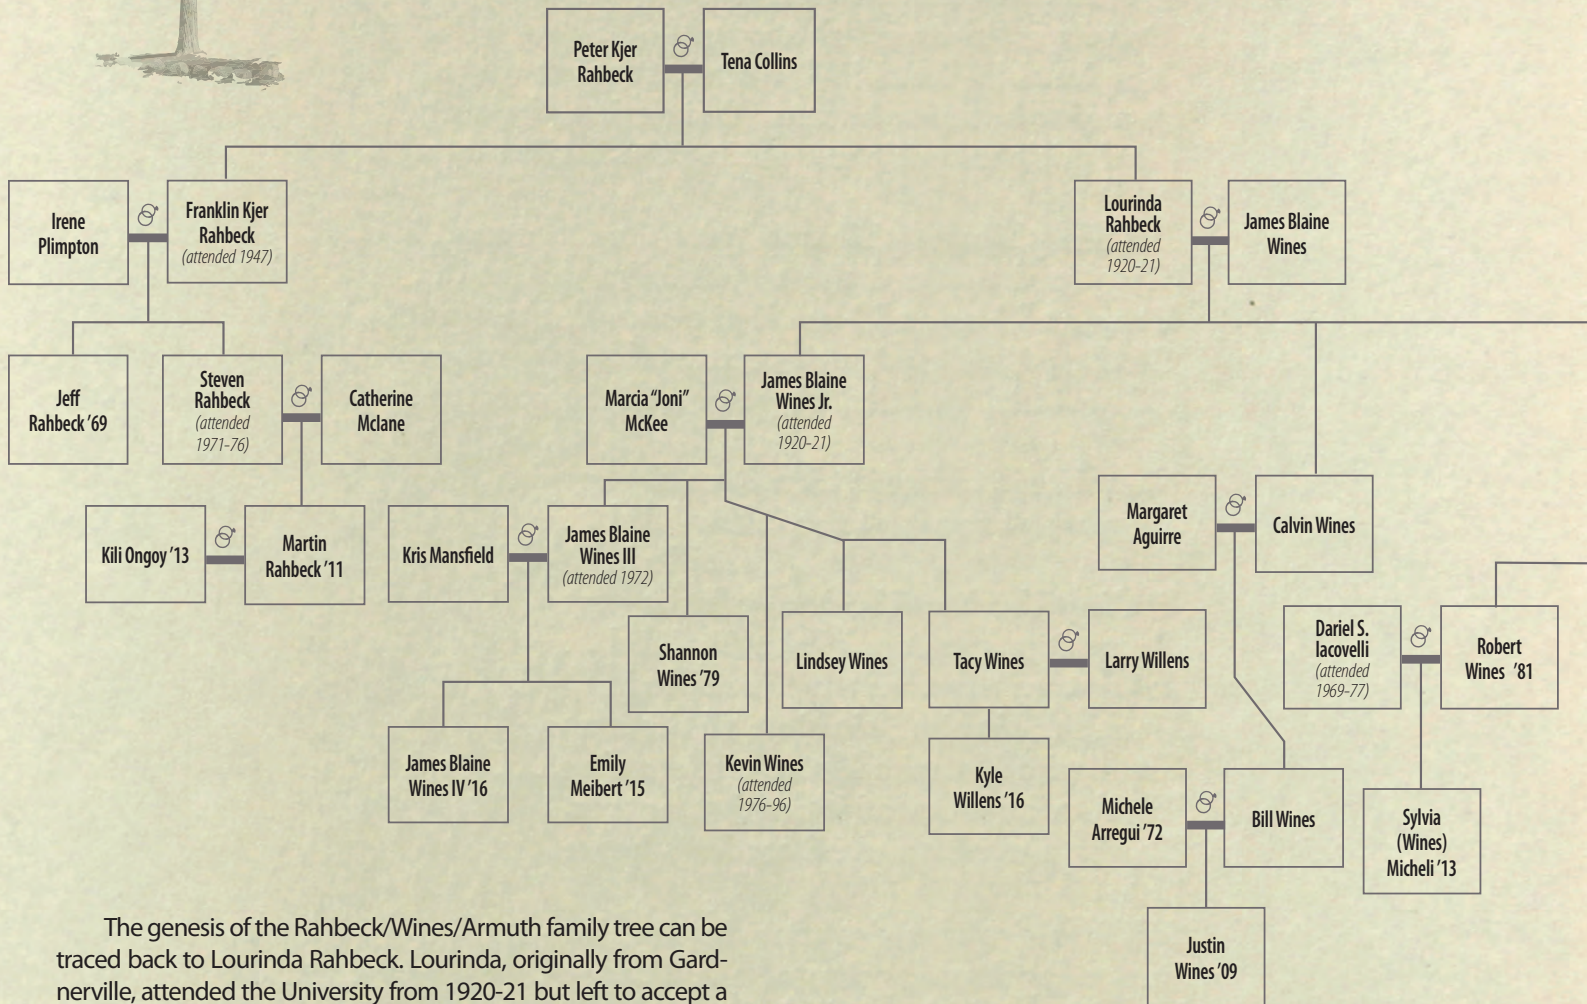

After graduation I will be getting married in June. I also hope to get a job with child welfare as an assessment worker shortly after.

Armuth / Wines / Rahbeck Family Tree

The genesis of the Rahbeck/Wines/Armuth family tree can be traced back to Lourinda Rahbeck. Lourinda, originally from Gardnerville, attended the University from 1920-21 but left to accept a teaching job in Ruby Valley. There she met her husband, James Blaine Wines, and they were married in 1922 and had five children. Their daughter, Mary Lourinda Wines, went on to marry her high school sweetheart, Charles Armuth Jr., officially merging all three families together.

The importance of education has been a shared core value for this vibrant family, and the University has played a major role in further connecting family members over several generations. The memories and anecdotes of the numerous family members who have attended the University are endless; from recounting their days in Greek life, to visiting campus and showing others where they lived as students, and sharing stories of attending the graduation ceremonies of their immediate and extended family members.

The Rahbeck/Wines/Armuth family tree is the result of marriages of deeply-rooted Nevada families that have always cherished and embraced what the University of Nevada could offer. It is a family tradition they expect to continue for generations to come.

Vierra bequest supports the University's students and programs

by CADDIE DUFURRENA '00

Valera Vierra attended the University of Nevada, Reno in 1950 and 1951. She continued her involvement with the campus through her service on the Nevada Alumni Council several decades later. Vierra also served on the Southern California Alumni Chapter Board and was involved with the chapter's fundraising and administration of its student scholarship. For her service, Vierra received the Alumni Service Award in 1980.

After her death in June 2017, gifts from Vierra's estate have been given to support several programs across campus and to establish a new scholarship.

A portion of Vierra's gift was directed to the Friends of the Library Annual Fund and will support the work of Special Collections and University Archives, which contains the University's rare books, book arts collection, manuscript collections and university archives. These materials are used by University members and the community for research and scholarship.

The Reynolds School of Journalism has also received a portion of the gift to support innovative projects that promote diversity, equity and inclusion. The Reynolds School was honored with the 2019 Equity and Diversity Award from the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication, reflecting its commitment to building a culture of inclusive excellence.

Valera left an additional gift to benefit the University's Unrestricted Excellence Fund which supports the school's mission of excellence in instruction, world-improving research and meaningful community engagement. This portion of Valera's gift may provide for student scholarships, contribute to faculty salaries, fund innovative education programs, or support countless other University initiatives.

The final gift from the Vierra Estate will establish the Valera Vierra Quasi Scholarship Endowment which will be awarded to students who graduate from a southern California high school and choose to attend Nevada.

Vierra's generosity has a broad impact across the University's campus, and many members of the campus community will benefit from her philanthropy.

FROM THE PRESIDENT //  > unr.edu/president

One more University superlative; time to say so long

 Jeff Dow

The past decade has seen many remarkable achievements by our University.

We've reached record levels of National Merit and Presidential Scholars. We are at record levels for diversity in our student body. We've seen faculty reach historic levels of achievement. The physical footprint of our campus has changed dramatically, with nearly $500 million invested in capital projects since 2011, and only $71 million of that figure coming from state funds. For the entire decade, we have been recognized among the "Top Tier" of the best national universities by U.S. News & World Report. In 2018, we achieved the prestigious classification of "Very High Research," or "R1," by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

And in late January, the University of Nevada, Reno was classified as "Carnegie Engaged" by the Carnegie Foundation. It was a reflection not only of how the institution has matured in recent years, but how it has creatively and successfully met the new expectations of a growing community and state.

From a programming and partnership perspective, "Carnegie Engaged" means that through increased collaboration with our community and statewide partners, significant co-curricular growth that has seen record student involvement in the community through civic engagement, and the maturation of the delivery of services and expertise of our faculty, students and staff, we are meeting the engagement needs of our constituents, in a variety of areas. It is also a testament to the extraordinary level of commitment shown on a daily basis by the people of our institution. Time and again when there have been needs, our people have found collaborative solutions that have profoundly impacted the future of all Nevadans.

As many of you already know, my time as president is winding down. In 2021, I transition to the faculty of the College of Business, following nine years as president.

I wish to express my sincere gratitude to the people of our University – students, faculty, staff, alumni, friends and the citizens of our community who so dearly love our University. Perhaps with the news of "Carnegie Engaged," this is the best place for this column to end. More than 30 times through this column over the past nine years, I've shared the accomplishments, the hopes, the dreams, and the transformational reach of what I called "The People's University" during my inaugural remarks in 2012. Much has changed since then. The one constant has been the remarkable work of our people. The dedication of our people, and their passion for the mission of our University, is reason to feel excited about what lies ahead. Thank you for what has been the responsibility of a lifetime.
