Welcome

Dear Nevada Visitor:

We are very happy that you are considering Nevada for your vacation, business trip or leisure getaway.

Nevada is a land of surprises. Did you know it's the most mountainous state? Travelers will see mountains in all directions. High-desert landscape offers sparkling rivers, shimmering blue lakes, towering pine forests, beautiful trails and unspoiled views.

Whether you visit Reno, Lake Tahoe, Las Vegas or historic mining towns, you'll find an intriguing variety of activities, events and attractions to make your trip pleasurable and memorable.

Dramatic wide-open spaces are easily accessible on Nevada's straight, uncrowded roads. Enjoy resort hotel amenities, dazzling nightlife and casino entertainment, fabulous shopping and fine dining, then venture beyond the city lights for excitement of a different kind.

Winter at Reno and Lake Tahoe is all about skiing and snowboarding at 18 resorts. In Las Vegas, one can tee off on lush golf courses year-round. Elko celebrates its ranch-life heritage with the National Cowboy Poetry Gathering, and Ely shows off frozen artwork at the White Pine Fire and Ice Show.

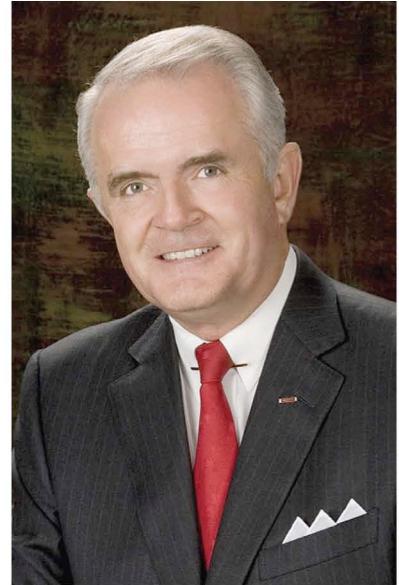

Spring snowmelt delivers whitewater to the Truckee River for rafting and kayaking in Reno, and motorcycles head for the Laughlin River Run on the Colorado River. Summer is for water sports on Lake Mead, glimpsing wild horses while rolling down the tracks on the historic Virginia & Truckee Railroad between Virginia City and Carson City, savoring the Best in the West Nugget Rib Cook-off in Sparks and enjoying theater on the beach under the stars at the Lake Tahoe Shakespeare Festival.

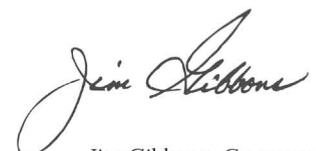

Autumn's golden aspens and cottonwoods create a picturesque setting for a hike, and sunny, mild days are perfect for driving on Nevada's Scenic Byways, sampling the sweets at the Genoa Candy Dance Arts and Crafts Faire or taking in the Pahrump Fall Festival.

Anytime of year is perfect for strolling through Nevada's fascinating museums and art galleries, locking your love at Lovers Lock Plaza in Lovelock, or driving on the "Loneliest Road in America." Nevada's natural beauty shines at Great Basin National Park, neighboring Grand Canyon and Death Valley national parks and our many amazing state parks.

Las Vegas Territory/Southern Nevada

Las Vegas barely needs an introduction. About 40 million annual visitors make it one of the most popular tourist cities in the world. Enjoy exquisite accommodations, high-end shopping, world-class entertainment and gourmet dining.

Off the Strip, head into the wilderness around Las Vegas in Red Rock Canyon National Conservation Area or Valley of Fire State Park, ride the wild Colorado River through picturesque Black Canyon or tour the Hoover Dam. Other cities, such as Laughlin, Mesquite and Primm, offer Vegas-style gaming at a more relaxed pace, and Boulder City, one of only two Nevada communities where gaming is outlawed, is a quiet desert escape.

Reno-Tahoe Territory/ Northwestern Nevada

Northwestern Nevada has something for everyone. History buffs will fall for Virginia City, once among the West's richest cities, and Genoa, one of the oldest settlements in Nevada. The nerve center of the state, Carson City, is full of historic homes and government buildings among quiet, tree-lined streets. Nevada's second-largest metropolitan area, Reno and Sparks, offers visitors upscale accommodations and Nevada-style entertainment as well as great shopping and a vibrant arts scene. And who can forget Lake Tahoe? A top ski destination by winter, and water sports mecca by summer, it is arguably the most beautiful and picturesque alpine lake in the world, just 30 minutes from the Reno-Tahoe International Airport.

Cowboy Country/Northeastern Nevada

Wide-open vistas, soaring, snow-capped peaks and blue skies as far as the eye can see—this can only be one place, Nevada's Cowboy Country. The northeastern part of the state is a rugged, untamed land, suited for the hardy, tough-as-nails men and women who give it its name.

For more than a century, cattle and sheep ranches have been a primary feature of this region, and its culture reflects that. From Elko's world-famous National Cowboy Poetry Gathering and Basque eateries to tens of thousands of square miles of undisturbed sagebrush, the pace of life in Cowboy Country is refreshingly slower than visitors might be accustomed to. It's comforting to know that in some parts of the country, a handshake still goes a long way.

Pony Express Territory/ Northcentral Nevada

It took determination, bravery and a strong horse to transport mail across Nevada 150 years ago. The short-lived Pony Express Trail was rife with danger and required a special breed of person to be successfully navigated.

Today, a crossing of U.S. 50 through Nevada, which roughly follows the same route as the legendary mail route, is much less harrowing, but still offers plenty of adventure. Known as "The Loneliest Road in America," the highway passes through Dayton, Fallon, Austin, Eureka and Ely as it traverses the state to Great Basin National Park on the Utah border. The lonely miles of the road are a stark contrast to these warm, welcoming communities that embody Nevada's rural hospitality.

Nevada Silver Trails/Central Nevada

This region makes up the largest, most diverse, and most sparsely populated section of Nevada. From the lofty slopes of Nevada's highest peak, 13,141-foot-tall Boundary Peak, to the scorched canyons and washes of Death Valley National Park, Nevada Silver Trails has enough open country to satisfy even the most devoted adventurer.

From the west, the territory is accessed by U.S. 95, where towns such as Tonopah, halfway between Las Vegas and Reno, and Beatty, the gateway to Death Valley National Park, are great for loading up on adventure supplies or as destinations in themselves. On the eastern side of the state, U.S. 93 provides access to Lincoln County's five state parks, and towns including Caliente and Pioche. Farther off the beaten track lies the Extraterrestrial Highway, where long, desolate stretches of road surrounding the town of Rachel have been known to make travelers see—or think they've seen—eerie lights in the distance.

Indian Territory/Statewide

Steeped in tradition and culture, Indian Territory is the heart of wild, untamed Nevada. While the state's written history extends only into the 1800s, the history of its native people can be traced to more than 10,000 years ago. Some of the country's best-preserved petroglyphs in Valley of Fire State Park and other Nevada locations offer a glimpse into the daily lives of the early ancestors of Nevada's Paiute, Shoshone, Washoe and other tribes.

Powwows and traditional celebrations around the Silver State offer visitors a look at the vibrant, rich culture of Nevada's American Indian tribes.

Parks: 25 state parks; Great Basin National Park; Death Valley National Park; Lake Mead National Recreation Area

Precious Stone: Black Fire Opal

Reptile: Desert tortoise

Rock: Sandstone

Semi-Precious Stone: Turquoise

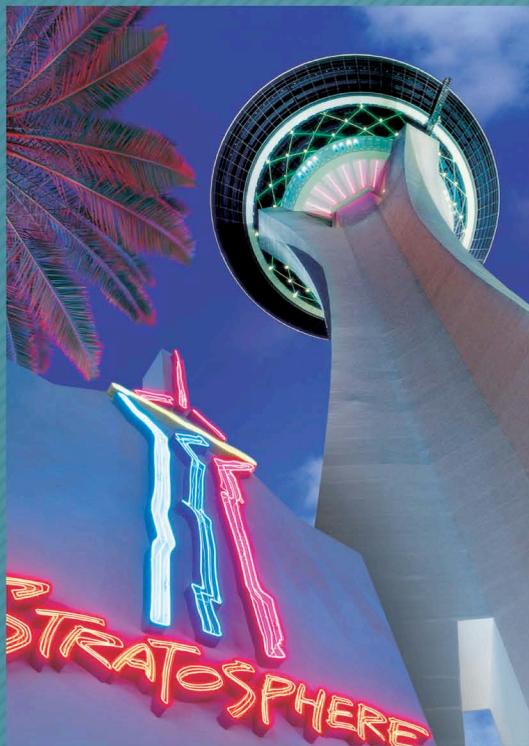

Song: "Home Means Nevada," written by Bertha Raffetto of Reno and adopted by the legislature in 1933.

State Universities: University of Nevada, Las Vegas; University of Nevada, Reno.

Statehood: Nevada was admitted to the Union on October 31, 1864.

*One pack per day

Las Vegas Territory/Southern Nevada

Outside the restaurant's floor-to-ceiling windows I watch a dazzling water and light show dance across the lake. I cut into my butter-soft filet mignon as my mind wanders to the day's events. Just this morning I marveled at the power of nature as I watched tens of thousands of gallons of water per second rush through the Hoover Dam's outlet valves. As I take my first succulent bite of the perfectly prepared steak, I think of all the high-end boutiques along the Strip and the afternoon I spent window-shopping at fabulous malls.

Over a decadent dessert of impossibly rich cheesecake, my mind wanders to tonight and tomorrow. Any resort I step into offers a world-class nightclub and party that promises to be a highlight of my trip. Or maybe I'll turn in early and go exploring a little more tomorrow; I'm pretty sure I heard something about an 80-mile-per-hour roller coaster in Primm...

Las Vegas nightlife is legendary—the city boasts some of the most exciting clubs and parties in the world—and the thrill of letting it ride on a straight flush is a feeling that will not soon be forgotten. But in the wild deserts, exhilarating waterways and rugged mountains of the Las Vegas Territory, the action of the City of (Neon) Lights is only the beginning.

Adventurous souls will find peace on the hundreds of rock climbs in Red

Rock Canyon National Conservation Area, and among the otherworldly formations of Valley of Fire State Park. Shop-aholics can get a fix at the top-notch shops and malls that line Las Vegas Boulevard. Foodies can indulge in some of the world's best dining at exquisite eateries in nearly every resort and a handful of celebrity chef-owned restaurants. Kids and kids at heart can enjoy myriad thrill rides, from the state's tallest, longest roller coaster in Primm to the world's highest atop the Stratosphere. Golfers will marvel at the area's more than 60 golf courses and the superb year-round play. Culture and history buffs could spend weeks exploring petroglyphs in various locations, and museums ranging from Boulder City's Railroad Museum to the living museum of the Springs Preserve, just minutes from the Strip. A houseboat on lakes Mead or Mojave makes the perfect family getaway or reunion venue for old college friends, and a whitewater trip through Black Canyon will cool down even the most scorching summer day. Sports fans can take in a University of Nevada, Las Vegas baseball, basketball, football, soccer or volleyball game, cheer for the city's Triple-A 51s, or get an octane boost at the Las Vegas Motor Speedway.

The variety of choices in the Las Vegas Territory is so enormous that it might, at times, seem daunting. But rest assured, whatever your taste, you're sure to find plenty of it here... You just might need to come back a few times to see it all.

FACT

As you might expect, America's only nighttime National Scenic Byway is found in Las Vegas. Las Vegas Boulevard, better known as the Strip, shines like no other place on earth. The Strip begins with the famous "Welcome to Las Vegas" sign on Sunset Road and ends at Sahara Avenue.

Reno-Tahoe Territory/Northwestern Nevada

After a raucous match of beach volleyball, the cool, shimmering surface of Lake Tahoe catches my eye—those refreshing waters are just what I need after such a workout. I jump in and swim to a nearby buoy. I tread water for a moment and look toward the still visible bottom, now more than 50 feet below. Satisfied with my short swim, I return to shore. The hot summer sun immediately starts warming me as I sprawl on my towel. As luck would have it, I've made it back just in time to greet the waitress and the frosty Rum Runner I ordered. I honestly can't count how many times I visit Lake Tahoe's Zephyr Cove each summer, but it's moments like this that remind me, it still isn't enough.

There is not a bad time of year to visit the Reno-Tahoe Territory. Winter brings epic snows to the nearly 20 world-class ski resorts around Lake Tahoe, which vary from cozy, three-lift operations to massive winter playgrounds with thousands of acres of skiable terrain. The villages at Heavenly, Northstar-at-Tahoe, and Squaw Valley are full of shops and attractions to entertain non-skiers and excellent restaurants and bars for an après ski cocktail and meal. For a break from the winter chill in the mountains, head into Reno, Carson City or Carson Valley to warm up with a round of shopping and dinner.

As the snow melts, Reno-Tahoe Territory transforms into a spring paradise. Wildflowers grace the mountain slopes and desert valleys, and whitewater turns the Truckee and Carson rivers into kayaking and rafting paradises. Though the highest mountains remain too snowy for hiking just yet (spring skiing anyone?) many lower elevation trails offer a chance to work off some winter pounds. Spring is also a great time to venture into the desert before the summer heat sets in.

It's almost impossible to choose a favorite season in this part of Nevada, but summer definitely makes its case. Just about every weekend is full of celebrations and special events in nearly every city and town in the territory. Artown, Reno's celebration of everything arts-related, spans the entire month of July, and almost a dozen farmers' markets provide fresh fruits and veggies in lively outdoor settings. Hundreds of miles of hiking and biking trails cater to every fitness level, and the shores of lakes Tahoe and Pyramid clamor with sun-hungry beachgoers and boaters. Camping and off-roading are popular in the summer, and thousands of acres of mountain and desert terrain ensure you'll have plenty of space to roam.

With so many events to experience in Reno-Tahoe Territory, a lot spill over into fall. Mountain trails transform under changing aspen and cottonwood leaves, making this a good time to revisit your favorites. Though it starts to get a little chilly for a dip in Lake Tahoe, lakeside restaurants still offer stunning views, and smaller crowds than in the summer months. October 31 is Nevada's birthday, and the Nevada Day Parade in Carson City shows locals and visitors alike, that even at almost 150 years old, the state knows how to party.

Midway through our cocktails, my friends and I turn to the topic of snowboarding and start sharing our increasingly unbelievable tales of winter glory. I think how amazing it is that in only six months this summer paradise will be blanketed in feet of snow and transformed into a winter playground that rivals the best in the world.

Cowboy Country/Northeastern Nevada

To say that I was shocked at the sophistication of the poets on stage would be an understatement. When I heard about Elko's National Cowboy Poetry Gathering, I figured I would hear a couple of amusing poems, play western-dress-up for a weekend, and sample the traditional Basque drink, the Picon Punch. All of those things happened, but what I didn't expect was some of the most amazing poetry I've ever encountered. From the side-splittingly funny, to the heart-wrenchingly morose, this was good stuff.

The next day I got to thinking, if the poetry is so great and unexpected, what other secrets does this part of Nevada hold? What surprising adventures might await in this rugged but welcoming corner of Nevada? And how was I going to finagle the extra time off work to find out?

The big skies and towering peaks of Cowboy Country set the backdrop for adventures worthy of the territory's namesake. Northeastern Nevada is a place where ranching and cowboys are still a very real part of everyday life—a place where western hospitality rules and a person is only as good as their word.

Outdoor enthusiasts can find something new and exciting each season in this varied region of the state. Winter brings the chance for snowmobiling over thousands of untouched acres, ice fishing on Wildhorse Reservoir, or heli-skiing in Nevada's Alps, the Ruby Mountains. Backcountry skiing opportunities continue well into the spring, and fishing season in Cowboy Country is a waking dream for anglers. Summer opens thousands of miles of hiking trails, from the 37-mile Ruby Crest National Recreation Trail, to more remote routes in the East Humboldt Range and Jarbidge Mountains. ATV enthusiasts will find countless dirt roads, prime for some exciting riding. Summer is also a prime time to pitch a tent or park an RV at any of the area's dozens of campgrounds or RV parks. Hiking and off-roading remain good well into fall and sportsmen and women will enjoy some of Nevada's best hunting here in autumn.

Visitors interested in culture and history won't want to miss Elko's annual National Cowboy Poetry Gathering in January, and the California Trail Interpretive Center and Northeastern Nevada Museum offer information-rich exhibits that highlight the area's past. Farther west, Lovelock is one of the only towns in the country with a circular courthouse, and couples can show their devotion to each other by locking their love at Lovers Lock Plaza.

With all of the excitement and adventures to be had in Cowboy Country, you're probably going to work up quite an appetite. Lucky for you, Basque dining is on the menu. Eateries from Winnemucca to Elko specialize in hearty fare with steak, lamb, pasta, beans, salad, fries, rich red wine, and even jumbo prawns, all served family style. After a filling Basque meal, check into a local bed and breakfast for some rest and relaxation, or a guest ranch to try your hand at roping and riding.

Few places in the world offer such a unique and seamless melding of past and present as Cowboy Country. Take a long trip to see for yourself, but be careful, once you've tasted this lifestyle, you might find it difficult to leave.

Pony Express Territory/Northcentral Nevada

It's not hard to imagine a young, adventurous cowboy astride a muscular, galloping horse as I drive up the hill into Austin. More than 100 years ago Pony Express riders raced the mail across Nevada along nearly the same route I'm driving today. With minor exceptions, little of the scenery has changed. I stop at a cozy diner in town. After the friendly, prompt waitress takes my order I think how much those riders would have appreciated a big, juicy burger like the one I'm about to eat, or how much they would have enjoyed the friendly, hospitable locals I've met, instead of the hostile bandits they had to contend with.

My means of travel are definitely more comfortable than those the riders knew, my purpose more relaxed, and my encounters more amiable, but the open land and sweeping vistas make me feel very close to them and their adventurous spirit. Nevada has a way of bringing past and present together in this way, and it is somehow comforting to know that this will always be the Pony Express.

The Pony Express Territory crosses the center of Nevada and spans the years that comprise the state's varied, rich history. From the inviting towns that dot "The Loneliest Road in America," U.S. Highway 50, to the old mining settlements tucked into remote valleys and mountains, Pony Express represents everything that makes Nevada unique in one package. It doesn't matter which direction one chooses to cross the Pony Express, though most travelers do so from west to east.

From the west, you can start in Dayton or on Alternate 50 in Fernley. Dayton holds joint claim with Genoa as Nevada's first settlement—the two towns maintain a friendly rivalry over the auspicious distinction—and traces its origin back more than 150 years. Continue east to Lake Lahontan, a reservoir that has become a summertime water sports mecca. Farther east you'll enter the biggest town along the route, Fallon. Stop in for lunch or peruse the downtown shops along historic Maine Street. ATV enthusiasts will marvel at 600-foot-high Sand Mountain, about 30 minutes east of Fallon.

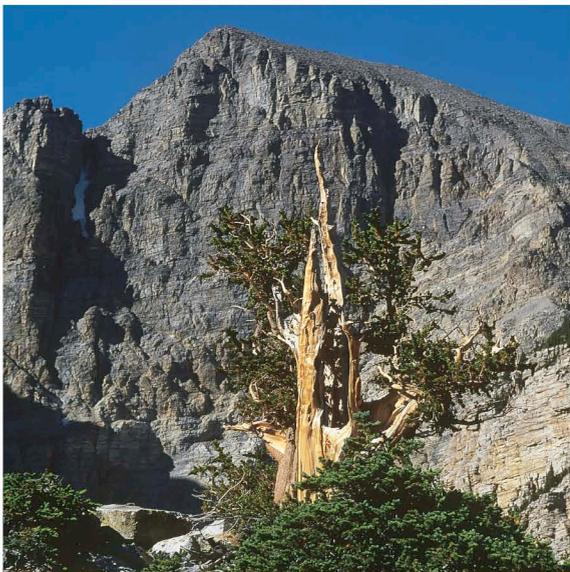

Continue east past Middlegate before taking State Route 722 over Carroll Summit. The alternate route isn't much longer and includes striking desert scenery. Stop in Austin for a quick bite at one of the mom-and-pop diners. After your meal, spend the night in one of the friendly motels or continue to Eureka, which also offers lodging. While in Eureka, take in a performance at the beautifully restored opera house; the shows vary from Shakespeare to folk music and can fill up quickly, so plan ahead.

Your next stop is Ely, where Hotel Nevada offers quirky, comfortable rooms and one of the best homemade pizzas this side of New York City—or eat your dinner in a jail cell at the steakhouse in the Jailhouse Casino. The Ward Charcoal Ovens and Cave Lake state parks, both minutes south of Ely, are great places to spend an afternoon exploring. On your final leg of the journey before the Utah line, stop at Great Basin National Park to tour Lehman Caves or climb 13,063-foot Wheeler Peak, Nevada's second-highest mountain.

FACT

The world's oldest species of tree, the bristlecone pine, is found at Great Basin National Park and a handful of Nevada mountain ranges. These trees can live for 5,000 years or more.

Nevada Silver Trails/Central Nevada

The juxtaposition between the bright stars and the pitch black of the night sky strikes me as nearly poetic. Gazing at the brilliant celestial diamonds, I'm reminded of so many nights, deep in the Nevada outback, days away from the nearest civilization. It's comforting to know that, unlike all those adventures, tonight I am mere minutes away from a comfortable bed, running water, and complimentary breakfast. For on this evening, I'm not camped in an isolated corner of the state, I'm stargazing in Tonopah, home to some of the darkest nighttime skies in the country, and notably named the No. 1 stargazing destination in America by USA Today.

Nevada Silver Trails is named for the two highways that frame it on the east and west, U.S. 93 and 95 respectively. The state's largest territory is also its most diverse, from the scorching, arid expanse of Death Valley National Park, to the windblown heights of Boundary Peak—at 13,141 feet, Nevada's highest point—the region has a little bit of everything.

The eastern side of Nevada Silver Trails is anchored by the towns of Caliente and Pioche. Caliente, named for the nearby hot springs, is a great base camp for exploring the area's five state parks: Beaver Dam, Cathedral Gorge, Echo Canyon, Kershaw-Ryan and Spring Valley. Pioche is also a great starting point for state park exploration, and holds the notorious distinction of being one the deadliest towns in the Old West. Rumor has it that 75 men were buried in the town's cemetery before anyone died from natural causes. Between Caliente and Pioche is Panaca, one of only two Nevada towns to prohibit gambling (Boulder City is the other) and the state's only "dry" town.

The vast, sparsely populated center of the region is home to State Route 375, better known as the Extraterrestrial Highway. Sightings of strange lights in the night sky and the highway's proximity to the Nevada Test Site and secretive Area 51 lend to the lore surrounding the area. The Little A'Le'Inn restaurant, motel and gift shop in the tiny town of Rachel is a celebration of all things out-of-this-world.

The western section of Nevada Silver Trails is home to Pahrump, Beatty, Goldfield, Tonopah, Hawthorne and a handful of other small towns. Pahrump and Beatty in the south share claim as Nevada's gateways to Death Valley

National Park, the largest national park outside of Alaska. Just a short drive from Beatty, Rhyolite is one of Nevada's best-preserved ghost towns.

Goldfield and Tonopah were founded in the early 1900s following discoveries of gold and silver in the region. Each town boomed into bustling cities—Goldfield's population once reached nearly 30,000—and later declined with the mines.

Though much of Goldfield was destroyed by fire, the town remains an interesting "living" ghost town, and Tonopah, which suffered no such disasters, is home to many intact turn-of-the-century structures. Numerous lodging and dining options make Tonopah an ideal place to stop overnight, and some of the country's darkest nighttime skies make for stellar stargazing.

The Army town of Hawthorne is home to the largest weapons depot in the U.S. and is Nevada's gateway to Yosemite National Park. Spend a night and stock up on supplies before heading into the mountains. Walker Lake is just north of Hawthorne. One of the largest natural lakes in the state, Walker is a remnant of ancient Lake Lahontan, which once covered most of western Nevada, and is a prime spot for summertime water sports.

FACT

The Devil's Hole Pupfish is one of the rarest fish on earth. Their numbers rarely exceed 500 and their natural habitat, Devil's Hole in southwestern Nevada, is barely larger than an average car.

Indian Territory/Statewide

I gaze in awe at the wavy lines etched onto a boulder at Grimes Point. They're not high-art by any means. Actually, the markings are quite rudimentary. My amazement at the carvings—the most detailed of which resemble stick figures—comes from the knowledge that some of them were on these rocks before Egypt's first pyramid was even conceived. I think of how different life in the valleys of Nevada must have been so long ago, how incredible it is that the native peoples of these lands have continued their cultures for millennia, and how exciting it is that those cultures still exist today in pockets all around the state.

Nevada's Indian Territory encompasses the entire state—the ancestral homeland of Paiute, Washoe and Western Shoshone tribes for more than 10,000 years. Nearly 30 colonies and reservations spread across the state and offer visitors recreational opportunities as well as a chance to witness and experience the traditional ways of Nevada's first civilizations.

Some of the earliest evidence of Nevada's first settlers can be found at petroglyph sites like Grimes Point, near Fallon, where a trail leads past hundreds of boulders etched with circles, wavy lines, human figures and animals. Hickison Summit, between Austin and Eureka along U.S. Highway 50, is home to three large panels of petroglyphs, accessed by a quarter-mile interpretive trail. Valley of Fire State Park, about an hour east of Las Vegas, contains petroglyphs carved on rock faces more than 50 feet above the ground.

More leavings of Nevada's first inhabitants can be found at Toquima Caves near Austin, where pictographs—similar to petroglyphs, but painted instead of carved—cover the cave walls. Beginning in 1912, thousands of ancient artifacts were discovered in Lovelock Cave, among them the Nevada state artifact, a tule duck decoy.

The Lost City Museum in Overton, about an hour north of Las Vegas, contains baskets, pottery, and other artifacts recovered from Pueblo Grande de Nevada, an ancient city once inhabited by Anasazi and Pueblo Indians. The original site was flooded by Lake Mead after the construction of the Hoover Dam, the National Park Service built the museum and replica dwellings to preserve the findings. More American Indian artifacts can be viewed at the Nevada State Museum in Carson City and the Nevada Historical Society in Reno, which both contain samples of Dat-So-La-Lee Washoe Baskets from the 19th century.

While the history of Nevada's first inhabitants is rich and intriguing, the present is vibrant and exciting. Nevada tribes continue traditional celebrations, from the Washoe Tribe's Wa She Shu It Deh Native American Arts Festival at Lake Tahoe, to Shoshone and Paiute powwows all over the state. The festivals and powwows offer a chance to learn about Native cultures and how they have coexisted with their environment for thousands of years.

One of the most visited reservations in the state is the Pyramid Lake Paiute Reservation north of Reno. The water sport and fishing mecca is also steeped in history, some of which is on display at the museum and visitors center in Nixon near the lake's south shore.

Taking the time to gain a deeper understanding and knowledge of the first people to call Nevada home helps visitors better understand and appreciate this unique and rugged state.

Dat-So-La-Lee, a famous Washoe basket maker, wove more than 250 baskets in her lifetime. The baskets were woven at 25 stitches to an inch, and were so tight they could hold water.

I don't recall if it was the 12th or 13th hole, but the feeling that rushed over me as I watched my shot soar toward the pin... that, I'll never forget. In the last week and a half I had driven almost 100 miles in golf carts, used five bottles of sun block, lost four balls, and consumed incalculable amounts of water—and still had not played even a tenth of the golf Nevada has to offer. It was this realization that made me feel smaller than the ball I watched, more than 100 golf courses and thousands of holes, each with its own challenges and rewards...

I think I'm going to need a longer vacation.

A light snow swirls around me as I look south from the summit of Wheeler Peak to the Snake Range and the rest of Great Basin National Park. The flurries belie the mild temperature of this late spring day, adding to the allure of this unique landscape. Atop the peak's 13,063-foot summit, a moderate nine-mile hike, I am at the second-highest point in Nevada, surrounded by the largest concentration of high peaks in the state. Almost 3,000 feet below, at the bottom of Wheeler's precipitous northeast face, lies Nevada's only glacier, which is just a stone's throw from ancient bristlecone pine groves. A few miles farther down the mountain are the popular Lehman Caves. With enough ambition, I could see all these wonders in a single day, or draw it out and explore them each more intimately over a few days.

And that's the beauty of Nevada's dozens of national and state parks—they have the power to amaze and delight in an instant and the beauty to keep you around for a while.

As the chairlift carries me ever skyward I imagine carving smooth, flowing lines in the fresh powder beckoning me from below.

I strap in my back foot to make use of every second that stands between me and the first ride on a clean slope.

A couple of slow turns off the lift find me above an untouched, powdery black diamond run. Squinting in the morning glare, I find my line and drop into my first run. The nearly empty mountain is all mine. I carve hard on my heel, slicing through a foot of powder so light it bursts into a shimmering wave in front of me.

After what seems like the blink of an eye, I'm at the bottom, admiring my line with the giddy satisfaction only fresh snow can bring.

It's going to be a good day.

IN AND AROUND CITYCENTER:

The 67-acre CityCenter is comprised of a variety of urban dwellings:

- ARIA: a 61-story luxury gaming resort with 4,004 rooms; three primary pools and one European-style pool; 10 restaurants; a nightclub and numerous other salons; a fitness center; and a theater housing Cirque du Soleil's Tribute to Elvis Presley. The hotel tower, convention center, and theater are LEED Gold certified.
- CityCenter's Fine Art Collection: existing works and pieces specifically commissioned for CityCenter populate public spaces with contemporary masterpieces from 20th- and 21st-century artists, including Maya Lin, Jenny Holzer, and Nancy Rubins.
- Crystals: half a million square feet of luxury retail shops, restaurants, and entertainment.
- The Harmon Hotel: a luxury boutique hotel slated to open in late 2010.
- Mandarin Oriental: a 16-story, 160-room luxury hotel.

By 2020, the United States has the potential to reduce annual non-transportation energy consumption by about 21 percent, eliminating trillions of dollars in waste and resulting in a significant reduction of greenhouse gas emissions. This equates, annually, to removing every passenger vehicle and light truck from U.S. roads, according to a study released this year by global business strategy-consulting firm McKinsey & Company.

But, making that happen will require billions of dollars in up-front costs, and the biggest challenge might be forging alliances between all involved—utilities, regulators, manufacturers, government agencies, and energy consumers.

As the national debate over energy efficiency rages on in the halls of Congress, MGM is tackling the issue head-on in Nevada. The gaming, hospitality, and entertainment company redefines urban lifestyle and Las Vegas luxury with the opening of CityCenter in December. The new building brings something new and exciting to the Strip, while establishing a sustainable living. "From the beginning, we said we didn't want to do [sustainable]..."

With such goals as water conservation, preserving indoor air quality, energy savings, and alternative transportation at the forefront, the design team drew up what would become one of the world's largest LEED-certified communities. "LEED certification is a cooperative process between the owner, designer, and contractor," says Sarah Mejzer, communication committee chair for the Nevada Chapter of the U.S. Green Building Council. "Planning from the beginning helps [those involved] to make the right decisions, and the [buildings are] designed to take the best advantage of the site and materials."

CityCenter stands on the former site of the Boardwalk Hotel. The previous structure was imploded, and 85 percent of the remains have been put to use for CityCenter's construction blocks and mortar were used as crushed concrete and asphalt aggregate and for dust abatement during construction. Even curtains and carpets were repaired into packing material used for shipping recycled whole and broken glass and bathroom fixtures to other countries for reuse. Other sustainable construction measures include...
